

...and Kyroot said:

4-D-Time-sight would reveal that everything is stable and orderly, and that everything is chaotic and unpredictable, and that everything is creative and proper, and that everything is indistructable and disreputable, and that everything is etc, etc, and so-on, and so forth...

...and Kyroot said:

If it sounds funny, it is funny; if it sounds biased, it is biased;
and if it sounds true - I mean it REALLY sounds TRUE, then there might be SOME quasi-validity hanging about somewhere...maybe.

...and Kyroot said:

The Real Revolutionist knows that any mortal philosophy that was truly perceptive would be like a sculpture of welded jello.

...and Kyroot said:

One should only be "dull", on the surface, where it counts.

...and Kyroot said:

How do you, as reasonable, sophisticated ladies & gentlemen,
explain this:

In the City, 3-D People
can express as much emnity toward what they call evil
as they do toward what they call the good?

(You don't think you misunderstood what I said, do you?)

...and Kyroot said:

Lions, (at least real, revolutionist ones) never comment on the shortcomings of jackels.

...and Kyroot said:

An important observer, (at least important enough to be quoted by the City Press), opined that, "perhaps Mans' happiness
as much depends on His temperment as His destiny." Does no one yet recognized destiny as but temperment-in-a-mirror.

...and Kyroot said:

Man's ordinary history now believes that He may be 4 million years old, but his recorded history only covers the last six thousand years, and once at-a-different-angle, I asked a 4-D Historian why this might be?, why was nothing heard of Man for those first three million, nine hundred and ninty-four thousand years?

He thought for a moment, then said, "As best I recall, in those early days there wasn't any thing special to write home about."

...and Kyroot said:

Once while out in the bushes alone, and in a silly mood, I heard a certain Revolutionist sing,
"Oh, who shall comfort the rich?",
but then He realized that it was not a silly internal question.

(...but then,
they hardly ever are.)

...and Kyroot said:

The words of a Man who BELIEVES Himself to lie can never be taken with respect and regard by the People, (even though they know not why).

Aren't you glad, as always,
that this little maxim has no pertinence regarding one's own personal
State-of-affairs.

...and Kyroot said:

Who in the wonderful world of 3-D sports, do you suppose would still "love justice" if there was no punishment awaiting the unjust?

...and Kyroot said:

The Revolutionist knows that if He ever acknowledges an apparent
"good" done Him by the Ruling Powers He will most likely later submit to something a good deal less attractive.

Don't ever take party
favors unless you
catered the party.

...and Kyroot said:

I've heard it said that "There are some who may know their minds, but not their hearts.", which sounds plausible to City folks I guess, but let me ask you, can you conceive of an architect/contractor who produced buildings of only penthouses? No foundations, no lower floors, only penthouses.

The thing about all 3-D truisms is that they are like cream
puffs whose centers
are filled with puff.

...and Kyroot said:

Do you still believe that it is normally possible to give advice even to your best friend that is not based on the apparent self interests Life has installed
in us all.

...and Kyroot said:

Would singers give it up if they could act?

Would actors give it up if they could write?

Would writers give it up if they could run?, and would runners give it up if they could sing?

Whew, I hope that wasn't as tiring
as it was demoralizing,
I mean, confusing.
Whew.

...and Kyroot said:

Unless your business happened to be in rodent-aromas, never hire
those who always
"smell a rat."

...and Kyroot said:

To ordinary perceptions, it could be disconcerting to observe how easily and quickly new comers to the Bush will pledge their allegiance to almost any display of power.

(Yeah, but would you expect the chickens to stay for the week end without finding feathers in the bed?
What do you people
want, anyway.)

...and Kyroot said:

All morality is molecular.

..,and Kyroot said:

In regards to the external, it is said that a "revolution consumes an entire generation."
Can you conceive internally what it would mean for you to lose twenty years worth of your own thoughts, beliefs
and opinions.

(At least in the Real Revolutionist's case
he can truly bid His first-born "adieu"
AND "good riddance".)

...and Kyroot said:

Real Art is not intended to glorify the subject matter, as with the king and his statues,
but is as expression of personal joy from the Artist.

(To him, the subject matter is irrelevant.....,and I guess it's just as well
the king AND the

People don't understand

this.)

...and Kyroot said:

Is it harder to intellectually slip up, and surprise an extremely intelligent man, or an extremely dumb one?

Are you sure?

...and Kyroot added:

When asked, point-blank, "Are you SURE?", only those deep in the greasy embrace of certainty
can firmly refuse to answer, and likewise do so, and those who ran away while I was describing this.

(...that's no more than you deserve when using such aggressive terms as "point-blank".)

...and Kyroot said:

Everything everybody says should be taken down and used against them.

...and Kyroot said:

Anyone who buys anything should be forced to eat it.

...and Kyroot said:

No one with anything worth while to say should be allowed to say it.

...and Kyroot said:

Anyone who writes anything should be forced to believe it.....

(or eat it.)