

...and Kyroot said:

From a fully realized view-of-the-Few, This is about teaching a fish to swim, and a bird to fly.....(but
don't forget,
this is just so regarding the Few.)

...and Kyroot said:

The correct sacrafice for a new enlistee is not money, blood, or self-respect, but one's commonness.

...and Kyroot said:

A true leader could operate exemplararily as a follower when need be.

...and Kyroot said:

It takes more than one season to see a gold field to harvest.

(Diamells, are another matter.)

...and Kyroot said:

You could look upon This as a trans-dimensional, 4-D odyssey; a contemporary inner expedition....

Homer visits Disneyland
by way of a black hole.

...and Kyroot said:

Do you really understand that in the City it is the land-locked who write the most passionate odes to the sea.

...and Kyroot said:

The People all want a drink, but no one wants to be an alky.

...and Kyroot said:

I don't guess Life will ever be arranged so that the ordinary might ever hear what I have said regarding the benefits that would insue from physicians being always, and unconditionally positive in their diagnostic comments, but just perhaps things have shifted in another, modern area whereby a version of this approach might be possible. To wit: Produce and program a new computer which you announce can "do it all", and sure enough, no matter what problem, or question is submitted, after a reasonably impressive passage of time, and humming of the machinery the Big Bianary One tells you that a solution, a specific answer in your case is CERTAINLY possible, although it will take 25 years to perfect it.

...and Kyroot said:

Just because the Real Revolutionist doesn't honor ordinary feelings of nationalism doesn't mean He doesn't USE them, (and other stuff
as well).

...and Kyroot said:

And then there was an ole sore-head in the City's financial district who, for his own personal motto, appropriated the name of a certain well known firm, I.B.M.,
which he said stood for, "I Be Mad."

...and Kyroot said:

The actual definitions of all words are basically the same,

(if, "Y.K.T.T.", as always,
if You Know
The Trick.)

...and Kyroot said:

If, for some strange reason, a Revolutionist decided He wanted to involve Himself in the City notion of "sin", He would only do so IF He could find a way to transgress that would not be limited to one of the five senses.

...that's right, give ME some sin I can sink my teeth into...or your teeth into...or something.....

...and Kyroot said:

In the operations of the Theatre-Of-Rebellion, the Revolutionist knows not to ever bother asking the audience "how they like the show so far.":
The People did not purchase their tickets for additional doubt and confusion.

...and Kyroot said:

If you still have difficulty remembering, and realizing the conservative nature of Life, and change-in-the-City, just remind yourself of these facts: They still deal in verbally describable gods, they refuse to call the brain the mind, and they still put nipples on men.

...and Kyroot said:

All of a Real Revolutionist's words are in code, whether He intends it, or not.

You understand, this means that all
real info
IS a code.

...and Kyroot said:

Since several sticky seasons, and yummy years have passed since I first mentioned this, I believe it be time to remind you that,

"Opposites work together...
and sometimes they don't."

...and Kyroot said:

Other than regards mere physical injury, the Revolutionist knows that no "aid" will be forthcoming in the "no man's land" area of the battlefield.

...and Kyroot said:

Might it be, as they fear in the City, that all Men are not equally gifted?, or worse yet, that all ARE equally cursed?

Well, without me low rating myself to
theological dsicussions,
let me ask you,
cannot a blind Man speak?,
and a deaf Man taste?

...and Kyroot said:

In times of stress and confusion in the City it is well to recall that, "It is easier to walk on eggs than it is to scramble cobble stones."

...and Kyroot said:

The Real Revolutionist doesn't believe in midnight.

...and Kyroot said:

Tis said that, "Although he is not deadly, the flea does do all the harm he can.",but
what a limited view,
for he also "has all the fun he can."

...and Kyroot said:

No matter how attractive the idea might first seem, I tell you that,
"No one should try to live with a prophet.", (unless all of your "carryover", capital losses from last year are used up.)

...and Kyroot said:

In the City it is petty squabbles that divide friends, split neighborhoods, and bring down institutions...
likewise, sometimes
in the Bushes.

...and Kyroot said:

In the entire universe, nothing, nothing is so attractive,
so alluring
as He who goes about continually straightening pictures
on the wall.

...and Kyroot said:

In the City, all precious stones are diamells.

In the City, all believe their polyester
to be silk.

And a great cry of discovery
was heard throughout the City,
"All our pigs are fake."

...and Kyroot said:

In the City, ordinary reverence, without fear, is like a hole
without a doughnut...in fact it's worse, it's almost like self-pity without a pity.

...and Kyroot said:

For those of you who may not notice that at times Life does go beyond affording Man just minimal level pleasure, have you not heard that you can get PAID for sperm donations!

...and Kyroot said:

An honest Man is stronger than a polar bear."...no He's not, I was just repeating something
I read.

Sorry.

...and Kyroot said:

One simple reason that some other higher primate hasn't equally evolved with Man, and taken over the rule of the planet is simply that they weren't PUSHY.

...and Kyroot said:

And as Buddha's long forgotten cousin used to say, "Life is short,
but not so an insurance man's memory, or a rabbi's
grudge.

...and Kyroot said:

Comes the time you can no longer sit, awaiting the Grand Finale, the Final Act,
for you are
it.