

...and Kyroot said:

Men have said about themselves, "With faint priase we damn.", and I say that faint praise is better than
no praise,
and
a small damn
is better than
no flood at all.

...and Kyroot said:

If one found a particular idea to be temporaryily useful could it then ever be proven to be a false idea?

...and Kyroot said:

Ordinary religious-philosophers, in the attempt to prove and defend the existance
of "free will" always reach the place of having to whisper to god, "What do I say next?"

...and Kyroot said:

Necessity has no restriants.

...and Kyroot said:

If you think total abstinence is hard, try total moderation.

...and Kyroot said:

It has been said that "A little knowledge makes a Man doubt the gods.", so what might this insinuate regarding the gods themselves
getting a bit hip?

...and Kyroot said:

Do you think the opponents of "vice" enjoying discovering some as much as do exterminators rats?

...and Kyroot said:

What can be quicker than the mortal speed at which many things seem to go from being priceless, to being worthless.

...and Kyroot said:

If a "real man" were wont to complain it would be about publishers' too small print,
not his failing eye sight; about the cheapness of clothing manufacturers,
not his weakness for doughnuts.

...and Kyroot said:

It has been said that "No rich man was honest.", and that "Power never rests
in the hands of the noble.",
but friends,
let's face facts,
none of us
are all
that innocent.

...and Kyroot said:

And the Great Boo-Bah proclaimed: If I am ill it is only because I am sick.

...and Kyroot said:

Oh, brothers & sisters: Are you ready to die?

Are you prepared to meet your maker?

Are you people fixed up to do ANYTHING?

...and Kyroot said:

Some human philosopher once said, "There are natural laws, and man-made ones;
one is inescapable, while the other is ephemeral."

Let him tell that to the Man whose
forced profession
is that of
being executed.

...and Kyroot said:

Nothing can become "history" until at least 4 dimensions are running.

...and Kyroot said:

Conventional Men fear the unknown same as accountants dread to slop the hogs.

...and Kyroot said:

I once heard a Man identified as being a "jazz musician", and having never heard of such a thing I approached him and asked, "What does it take to be a jazz musician?", and he said, "Don't bug me, Pops." and I didn't. Am I now a jazz musician?

...and Kyroot said:

The Real Revolution has yet to be noted by history.

...and Kyroot said:

Men of peace are of no consequence unless flanked by the military.

...and Kyroot said:

I have heard Men define their science as "That process which permits no exceptions.", and I tell you that such a science would be a square lacking one corner.

...a process with its own
written-in doomsday
| clause.

...and Kyroot said:

For the ordinary, hate is probably the most felt, direct and clear cut emotion, (next, of course, to stupidity).

...and Kyroot said:

I've just begun work on my new book; its title is, "Hi, It Is I: Whee, Is That Me?"

...and Kyroot said:

It would seem that even the dullest of ordinary Men would smell something fishy regarding philosophers who unconditionally narrow down the source of all suffering
to women.

...and Kyroot said:

Based on your human speech and verbal logic, would it be better to have an impassionate, passive truth,
or an inflammable counter one?

...and Kyroot said:

I once heard a famous human declare that, "The voice of honest indignation is the voice of god."... would
one of you fine homo-sapien-himmers please tell me what a god would have to be indignant about?

...and Kyroot said:

I have observed that those Men who control their lusts do so because they have lusts weak enough to control.
I have further observed that those Men who cry out for others to control their lusts, themselves have lusts that would frighten the sheriff's brother-in-law.

...and Kyroot said:

Regarding the nature of "revealed", verbal truth: If cheating on your income tax
is not right why did not a one of the great religious'
founders
speak out against it.

...and Kyroot said:

The Real Revolutionist si He who would cry out, "If the truth be against us
we will fight the truth."

...and Kyroot said:

One of the worst foes of Man's recorded history is the precise, though indignant memory of eye witnesses.

...and Kyroot said:

An ordinary Man's life is like a marriage never consumated.

The Revolutionist, on the other hand...

...and Kyroot said:

The Real Revolutionist does not ask WHO the enemy is, but WHERE he is.