

...and Kyroot said:

Should a Man prefer to see a copy of a great work, or the original of a lesser one?

#7 can

#9 evil

righteusness

out of town

#11 serenely

#23 some of? 'Mans'

#27 cellulite

#29 Someone in the crowd

#31 mortals

---

...and Kyroot said:

Once heard a human say, "Anything I want to remember I write down in my notebook, then instead of wasting my time trying to remember what it was that I wrote down I spend my time looking for my notebook."

...and Kyroot said:

The Real Revolutionist would be He who would declare, "If I can't be in charge can't nobody be in charge."

...and Kyroot said:

The extraordinarily "useful" wouldn't be all that useful if just everybody knew about it.

(Only privileged information is useful information for the Few.)

...and Kyroot said:

The Real Revolutionist is a hermit unto Himself, even in the heart of the capitol city, and He understands the transcendental definition of a "hermit" to be: "One with a knowing but tight tongue."

(A verbous hermit is no hermit at all.)

...and Kyroot said:

Don't talk about other people; to do so only encourages them, (or you).

...and Kyroot said:

Even though Artists cannot normally overthrow the Ruling Powers, they can make them surprisingly uncomfortable.

...and Kyroot said:

And let us always remember, "Everybody's a dead giveaway."

...and Kyroot said:

If it be true, as someone has said, that it is within each Man resides the potential "destroyer of all evil, and the conveyer of all righteousness",
then if such should ever
arise within you,
you best hope you're at of town at the time.

...and Kyroot said:

All craft properly practiced can become one's Art.

...and Kyroot said:

More Words To Live By, Facts You Can Bank & Invest In: You may serenly ignore anyone who has ever said, "Never has civilization been so seriously threatened as today."

...and Kyroot said:

The People are continually distracted by their acceptance of the "referee" as "being in charge", and responsible for the final say,
while the Revolutionists
see that he is simply a paid employee.

(Can't ever forget that behind-all-scenes is the world of Behind The Scenes.)

...and Kyroot said:

When discontent is widespread, the Real Revolutionist knows that even a specious event, or issue can ignite
the rebellion.

...and Kyroot said:

I once heard of a test that was so simplistic, and obvious that one Man declared, "How could any one fail
it.",
but another said,
"Haven't you heard?, the King's son did."
The first fellow hesitated a useful moment, and added, "Ah, he must have cheated."

Epilogum I: Can "cheating" somehow cause one to horizontally
"fail"?

...and Kyroot said:

The Real Revolutionist understands that no one can actually be "freed"
by the efforts of another.

...and Kyroot said:

I'm not completely sure of all the reasons Man has for the celebacy of priests,
but at least one good one is clear,
it keeps down the birth rate for new little priests.

...and Kyroot said:

The Real Revolutionist knows you are to rob a thief, fool a fool, and rule a ruler.

Life will have it no other way.

...and Kyroot said:

An ordinary Citizen, who at age forty, is not a misanthrope, has either lived in a closet,
is lying to you,
or else is to be closely watched.

...and Kyroot said:

If, as the People believe, "good & evil" are living entities, merchants vying for Men's souls, what goods could "evil" possibly handle that would entice the astute?

...and Kyroot said:

For the Real Revolutionist the worst form of "tyranny" would be that of the weak and ordinary over the strong and noble.

...and Kyroot said:

Man's future-tomorrow is Life's present-now.

Go figure.

...and Kyroot said:

If sleep seems to be a reoccurring treatment for some a Mans' discomforts, then death must surely be a cure.

...and Kyroot said:

One of the Revolutionary definitions of morality would be: "Crawling on your belly through
'no-man's-land',
crying like everyone else."

...and Kyroot said:

Recently heard an "update" on a revered western maxim: Fellow said,
"I hate myself, therefore I am."

...now
ain't that sweet...

...and Kyroot said:

There are many ordinary things the Real Revolutionist has no time for, and right near the top of the list is any
"sexual fears."

...and Kyroot said:

Anyone who believes that some forms of "human ills" arise from Man's own cultures and institutions also believes that coloured eggs come from the easter pig,
and that fat comes from the cellulitte fairy.

...and Kyroot said:

I always liked the fellow, about whom it was noted, "Other than when talking about words themselves
he actually had little to say."

...and Kyroot said:

Someone if the crowd once noted that, "The dead govern the living.", but the Real Revolutionist knows that real power comes not from the past, nor even the present, but from a land of 4 or 5
where even our
"future"
is already out dated.

...and Kyroot said:

I believe my favorite mortal "punch line" of the month is, "I don't have to explain myself to the likes of anybody."

...and Kyroot said:

And then there was the little advertisement I saw that said, "For Sale:
washer and zither, will not separate."

...what fun these morkals be.