

Kyroot is Jan's literary fellow traveler who timelessly roamed the planet observing the humorous ups and downs brought on by the divided nature of men's minds (the result of Life's earliest experimentations in brain building to its latest, ever-boastful and simultaneously complaining productions—modern man).

He is Jan's "cosmic performer in the heuristic Work tradition of spiritual comedians and psychological assassins, "though his source is not some ancient lineage, but a rather blunt, point-blank understanding of how our minds function (regardless of how men believe them to function). Settle back into your cushy cerebrum and enjoy the show (at least until you begin to feel the lumps in that couch of complacency).

...and Kyroot said:

What Life internalizes, Man manifests.

Life makes Man act out what it may only be considering.

In a certain way, Man's actions are Life's
thinking-of-action.

...and Kyroot said:

An elderly Man who still faithfully pursued a rigorous exercise schedule was interviewed regarding his life and philosophy, and he unexpectedly told the interviewer, "Hell, those people who have been satisfied to live lives of wine, woman, gluttony, and peaceful TV-watching have the right idea. I was just always to chicken to do it myself."

Now that's getting closer to my kind of story.....
but they're awfully hard to come by.

...and Kyroot said:

Why is it that only gods seem to have written books?

Where is satan's agent
anyway?

...and Kyroot said:

I have heard mortals mention that to "live a good life is an art, not a science."

This is surely not to infer that living an evil one would be a science....

does it?

...and Kyroot said:

The Real Revolutionits sees the word "peace" as merely a mousey synonym for "stagnation."

Why do you think that the Ruling Powers so favor and encourage the People's
so-called
"customs"?

...and Kyroot said:

There was once a religious cult,(or maybe it was a political party, I forget which), whose beliefs no one could ascertain, but whose followers were passionate, vocal and visible in a manner most striking.
It was said simply that their's was a
"great belief.",
but
what else
IS
such a group?

...and Kyroot said:

The only info useful to the Real Revolutionist is "privileged" information.
All other data is just smoke
and noise.

...and Kyroot said:

What do you think Life may be up to again, in getting Man to seriously "question" the human concept of "bigness".

Mortal enterprises are driven to sloganeer, "Being biggest hasn't made us better; being better has made us biggest.", and other similar comments which seem to turn a distrustful focus on the whole picture of human engineered "bigness"?

I asked you "what might be up?" on the basis that Life has specific, observable need and appreciation for bigness, inthat it translates most often into — POWER which is the creative energy for both Man and Life.

...and Kyroot said:

I could say to you, and for you, that Man's 3-D-notions of good-&-evil are like lesser reflections of an earlier
4-D
division-of-labor.

...and Kyroot said:

Do you find it interesting that within the areas of Man's "creative arts" that He apparently intends to use his negative opinions as a kind of denial-of-existence.

He will dogmatically
proclaim, "I do not like that painting.",
and this is stated in such a manner as to leave no doubt that
the speaker is in fact,
denying that the
peice in question
is even art at all.

Now THAT'SA some strong opinion.

...and Kyroot said:

The Real Revolutionist does not see horizontal-wealth as a "problem",
merely its most likely price.

...and Kyroot said:

One definition of the "seditious", and "obscene" is, "That which once seen causes the observer to want more of the same."

Now let me ask you,
what kind of knowledge
would it be that would not casue you to want more?

Certainly not our kind,
the seditious and obscene.

...and Kyroot said:

The Real Revolutionist sees all parties, organisations, and institutions as crippled conspiracies; all visible authority being but partial reflections
of the Real Power.

...and Kyroot said:

Once you put anything into words, even support for the idea of "free speech",
you make possible debate which paves way toward defeat of the notion.

There is an unrecognized assault tendency to

3-D-discussion
hence,

the supremely important should never be said.

There, I've said it, and I'm glad.

...and Kyroot said:

The Real Revolutionist knows that in the exercise of power, "apparent"
deception IS deception, (and
then some).

...and Kyroot said:

If he were to truly encourage originality in his students, the teacher would tell the novice composer to "never do that which a copyist can do", and to the fledgling author, "Never say that which a critic could say about you."

...and Kyroot said:

The Boston Strangler had nothing on the grip words have on life.

...and Kyroot said:

How many "sins" can a Man commit alone?, and how many require assistance?

And which might be considered
"worse", His private ones or the collaborations?

...and Kyroot said:

And then there was the cute little scientist who had his theory of the "survival of the neatest."