

...and Kyroot said:

The Real Revolutionist knows that the only permanent ally is His own aim.

...and Kyroot said:

From one ordinary view, the Real Revolutionist can appear single-minded, and inflexible, but from another level
His power and aptitude for compromise
would seem infinite.

...and Kyroot said:

I once heard a mortal philosopher referred to as "He who sometimes skates dangerously close to the edge of significance."

...and Kyroot said:

The Real Revolutionist does not see human conflicts as being between good-&-evil, but between interests,
and His aim is no longer to somehow show-the-truth to others, but is to impliment the correct
in Himself.

...and Kyroot said:

The Ruling Power's Generals all believe that the manner and execution of battles are irrelevant, and that only the outcome is meaningful.

The Real Revolutionist
is not so
sure.

...and Kyroot said:

The dress required for life-among-the-greedy makes a mere hair shirt seem like a silk lounge.

...and Kyroot said:

I once met a human who was so attentive to, and appreciative of himself that he confided, "I'm like the father I never had."

...and Kyroot said:

With whom might the Real Revolutionist be in collusion?

...and Kyroot said:

I once heard a Prime Minister proclaim, "Public opinon wins wars.", and a General muttered, "And bullits help
a lot."

...and Kyroot said:

Only the "People", I mean the real bourgeoisie, we're talking "common man" here,
can forever be controlled by ordinary
fear of punishment, and routine hope
of reward.

(If you ever have times
when you wonder if you really are "all that
common" just remember
this.)

...and Kyroot said:

Once heard a famous inventor say that "Religion is bunk." Also heard a priest on the beach say that he felt the same about all those
"Edisons, Fords, and Westinghouses".

So,
it just goes
to show you, again.

...and Kyroot said:

Ordinary desires for self-improvement can be described as a Man serenading

His genes with that old favorite tune,

"Why do you do me like you do, do, do?"

...and Kyroot said:

The Real Revolutionist knows that the passions of the People have no lasting loyalty.

...and Kyroot said:

Big sentences require big periods.

...and Kyroot said:

There are those speeches and utterances of Man that strike wonder and joy in the hearts of the hearers. But if talk in general were of any particular merit, let's face it,
even your brother-in-law would
revered and famous.

...and Kyroot said:

If it is, as I have heard, that "A good example is a living picture of a good sermon." then a hand grenade would be a fucking masterpiece.

...and Kyroot said:

Remember, it was the Ruling Powres who gave the People the proverb, "If God be
for you, who can be against you.".....
who
indeed.

...and Kyroot said:

Everyone should always be complimented, (just in case you've mistaken your betters for your inferiors AGAIN.)

...and Kyroot said:

Real anger is either temporary lunacy, or brief lucidity; is all a matter of the difference between the fat-happy-many, and the lean-mean-few who don't give a damn
for
truth,
the state,
or propriety.

...and Kyroot said:

Just remember: You're never too old to be taken alive.

...and Kyroot said:

One human writer noted that, "Every Man is a son of His own handiwork." which may, or may not be very significant,
but at least it's better than what
my second cousin used to say, that
"Every Man is a son-of-a-bitch."

...and Kyroot said:

Eventually, eventually, I said, time teaches EVERYBODY a lesson.