

...and Kyroot said:

In the City, facts don't cease to exist simply because they're not true.

...and Kyroot said:

If the People say its important, even inevitable, be sure it is not.

...and Kyroot said:

Certainty, and desperation are the City's most common embalming mediums.

...and Kyroot said:

In ordinary City affairs, always say what it is you're going to say before you have to actually say it.

...and Kyroot said:

In ordinary City affairs, you can also say what it is that you're going to do before you actually do it...
(and especially so if you don't actually do it.)

...and Kyroot said:

Just "doing it" is always a cure for the reasons why you can't do it. .

...and Kyroot said:

If, as you reach your later years, you believe the greatest lesson you have learned is the 'value of time', then you have wasted yours.

...and Kyroot said:

More Useful Revolutionary Info: Question: How can you know if a sore leg muscle is sore enough to keep you from your daily run?

Answer: If it is ALMOST as sore as your consciousness muscle is over having a sore leg muscle.

...and Kyroot said:

A little everyday, run-of-the-mill stupidity may not hurt most people,
but in a Revolutionist it can be quite dangerous.

...and Kyroot said:

If life is like a great ocean liner the alert should always be prepared to abandon ship.

...and Kyroot said:

All apparent solutions unnoticably  demand that one cough up a price quite dear; that is, a piece of themselves; that aspect of them that was effected by the solution.

...and Kyroot said:

True survival is a matter of total structures, not of individual parts.
If the aggregate survives
so will the components.

...and Kyroot said:

Anyone who says, "I am rich beyond my wildest dreams." needs dream coaching... or
wildness lessons.

...and Kyroot said:

In the City I once heard a man loudly proclaim, "I am now prepared to love all of mankind,
except for my next door
neighbor."

Come on now, what'd you really expect.

...and Kyroot said:

From a particular view, it could be fairly said that a Revolutionist has no individual agenda;
in fact, no particular reasons
for what He does, and says.

...and Kyroot said:

If you can be "full speed pissed" within sixty seconds of awakening,
you are a world class pisser.

...and Kyroot said:

Maxium Update, Code Green,Z-42: When you have eliminated the impossible, the improbable, the uncertain,and the vague, then whatever remains, however unsettling and surprising it may be,
must be what's left.

...and Kyroot said:

Stupidity is a terrible thing to waste.

...and Kyroot said:

Probably the greatest waste of time for a Real Revolutionist is to actually have an enemy.

...or is that to
"actually have an inner life."?

No matter, they're both similar enough.

...and Kyroot said:

Everything in the City is just a prelude for what's coming up.

...and Kyroot said:

Everything you want in the City is just a substitute for what you're actually going to get.

...and Kyroot said:

If both parties are want to blame each other for all annoyances and disappointments, then what you might call a "relationship"
would be better named a mad, four legged dance attempted at two different tempos with four ears picking up two separate songs.
A ridiculous tango done
in a life boat from the Titanic.

...and Kyroot said:

I started to offer you this little four word maxium: Real Revolutions are untidy.", but actually,
compared to ordinary City life,
these uprisings are downright neat and exact.
(In the same way
a forest fire is symetrical and systematic.)

...and Kyroot said:

This could sound a bit "off-putting", but I know you can see measurements beyond the outlines of words, so here tis: Under most ordinary conditions, those who passionately struggle against the tyrannical and the cruel become themselves cruel and tyrannical.

You do see, or suspect the right angle view of this?

...and Kyroot said:

Proper plans and suitable munitions are part of the necessities for a Revolution, and which, fortunately, an alert Enlistee can obtain.

The remaining necessity is, unfortunately, ability.

...and Kyroot said:

If all of humanity were brought together and placed in a choir loft and directed to all sing out all at once, and all together, what would come forth would be the "answer." Your problem would be in knowing which song, that is, question, to ask for.

...and Kyroot said:

I guess one description of a "civilized Man", at least in City terms would be: One who can forgive those who help him.

...and Kyroot said:

In all ordinary Cities, a fresh, astounding mind is like a "second government" and cannot be long tolerated by the Ruling Powers.

...and Kyroot said:

If you still insist on looking at life as some kind of struggle, or contest, at least note this,
Life is the only winner.

...and Kyroot said:

If you wear cheap shoes don't ever look down.