Even the smallest of Revolutionist tales have room for infinity.

...and Kyroot said:

In that ole-City-you, one professed thinker once decalred, "A prudent question is one half of wisdom." Yeah, but which half?

...and Kyroot said:

In the City some say, "You are what you eat." And others say, "You are what you think.", but in the Bushes, it goes without saying, "You are what you are."

Hey, let's hear it
for the Bushes.

...and Kyroot said:

There was once a particular Revolutionist who, in the midst of being totally overheated,
considered going back
into the heart of the City
and making certain gestures
public.

...and Kyroot said:

Another way inwhich a wanna-be Revolutionist can do mayhem to Himself is in knowing that His old voices give falacious
directions, and to yet
give heed to them.

It is only a Real Revolutionist who can singlely
constitue His own crime scene
wherein He is both
victim AND perpetrator.

...and Kyroot said:

Apparently one of the signs used in the City to confirm your intelligence
is when you clearly affirm that "All creatures live by instinct alone, save Man."

...and Kyroot said:

Whoever first said that "Ignorance is no excuse." sure didn't take His own advice.

...and Kyroot said:

In His travels from state-to-state, the Revolutionist should have
"nothing to declare".

...and Kyroot said:

The second cousin of the so-called philosopher I previously mentioned recently pulled himself up to his full so-called height, and let go with what I'm sure was his one best verbal shot at semi-immortality. He proclaimed, and I quote, "Think of the mess we'd all be in were it not for the timely discovery of 'downhill'."

If it's been named, it's for sale somewhere.

...and Kyroot said:

The Revolutionist gladly lets others lead the lives that others believe must be lead.

...and Kyroot said:

I know I sorta "snuck it up on you" the first time, so let me now just say it outright and plain,
don't "phone-in" your life.

...and Kyroot said:

In the 3-D-world, there are no real "waves of the future", only "ripples of tomorrow", vibrations of next week.

...and Kyroot said:

You gotta wanna KNOW,
then you gotta DO.

...and Kyroot said:

If you feel obliged to announce that "It's Art", don't be too sure.

...and Kyroot said:

Beware, the dickle berries of the mind.

...and Kyroot said:

Other day I heard this guy out near the Bushes say, apparently to himself,
"Well, young feller, you're a mite
late; you done completely missed
the season for nouns
and conclusions."

...and Kyroot said:

Chew on this one: I once knew a Revolutionist whose prime efforts were devoted to a "war on suffering", and yet I never saw Him once give to charity.

...and Kyroot said:

Whatever it may have been initally, if you consent to "discuss it" it sure ain't no longer Art.

...and Kyroot said:

Remember: Life's been this way before.

...and Kyroot added:

And It left a trail, if you can find it.

...and Kyroot said:

Heard yet another City guy, wrap his hand around his beer, and his thoughts around his final philosophy when he noted, "Hey, its ONLY
wrestling."

...and Kyroot said:

The Past is a curious place to store things.

...and Kyroot said:

Regarding advertising, AND, I might add, usual advice: If you gotta be told what you want,
you don't want
nothing worthwhile.

...and Kyroot said:

Another unspotted, curio about Man's inner noise, I mean, life: One of the Partners has got to have everything explained to him even if he must do it himself.

...and Kyroot said:

I believe I have now collected sufficient evidence to safely state that reading is no worse
for you than watching TV.

...and Kyroot said:

In the City, Men slave, and know not that they do. Out near the Bushes
a few suspect they slave, but know not why.

Only the Real Revolutionist
may ever realize
both.

...and Kyroot said:

A hearty old City fellow, dressed mostly in clothes, gave me this definition which he insinuated had some deeper significance.

But be that as it may,
here she is: Circumcison:
Short-sheeting
a man's most private bunk.

...and Kyroot said:

When a Real Revolutionist says, "Spare me the details.", HE MEANS it!
