

...and Kyroot said:

Be warned: You gotta bend over to be a critic.

...and Kyroot said:

No one REALLY knows how to change, or they wouldn't talk about it.

...and Kyroot said:

One week-end thinker declared, "All change is illusory.", and his running partner retorted,
"Yeah, but so's all stability."

...and Kyroot said:

Oh, here's a new one I copied off a bathroom wall back in a City dive, I mean, "refreshment emporium", let's see, it went, "He who would be a sailor must first learn to navigate land"...did I copy that down right?

...and Kyroot said:

One half-alert City poet put it this way, "I sometimes fear that with man,
Nature may be a bit too much.
But who can imagine Her without us?"

...and Kyroot said:

The other night, out near where the Bushes begin, I heard a voice shouting out in the dark to somebody, thusly, "Hell, if you ain't worth a LOT more than you THINK you are, you ain't worth spit."

...and Kyroot said:

Never tell your children to "wise up" unless you're absolutely positive they'll never become your foe.
(And please don't make that gauche mistake of believing all children
are external phenomena.)

...and Kyroot said:

All bread is buttered on both sides if you're intent on dropping it.

(Lizzy Borden took an ax, and gave her children sixteen pats,
of margarine.)

...and Kyroot said:

Never trust a god who's shorter than you.

...and Kyroot said:

Remember: The object of City games is to establish rules that make it difficult to score, (much less, win.)

...and Kyroot said:

If there WAS no Code Of Conduct the Revolutionist would have to invent one.

Or, perhaps,
vicy-versy.

...and Kyroot said:

As far as certain "City views" are concerned, only a Real Revolutionist can willfully, and cheerfully
"totally miss the point."

...and Kyroot said:

Update R-47:

If its native to the City it doesn't count. You may, however, create a Revolutionist version OF it out in the Bushes.

...and Kyroot said:

Anyone who responds to you by saying, "Well, let's see, my first thought is,blah-blah-blah..." is generally not going to have a second one.

...and Kyroot said:

From one of those many little camp fires you see dotted around the edge of the City, I heard this stated, "If I ain't better
by tomorrow there ain't gonna BE no
tomorrow."

My query to you is this: Was that a comment on time, or health?

...and Kyroot said:

In the City the popularity of a thing depends on its lack of success.

...and Kyroot said:

The true need to conserve holds constant whether the savings involved seem relevant to you, or not.

...and Kyroot said:

A one eyed Man should not have soup.

...and Kyroot said:

Out in the Bushes, WAY out in the Bushes, the proper alarm clock for a weary Revolutionist is a rooster with a thirty-eight.

...and Kyroot said:

On the very day when His young child showed the first signs of comprehending the use of language, a Revolutionist took the lad into a deserted room, held him by the shoulders, and spoke to him for the first time in these words,
"I do not, I repeat, I do not EVER want to hear anything about your 'personal problems'.",
and the youth thought to himself,
"What a perfectly splendid and extraordinary first lesson."