Real Revolutionists are always jumping on to trains after they've already started, and leaping off well before they've stopped.

A Revolutionist's quadrosopic sight is the TRUE universal solvent.

In this journey some have attempted to call "life", we seem to have both water & wine, and the Revolutionist knows He must continually add wine TO His wine until there is no more;
until He reaches the point of vino correcto, vino perfecto;
the stronger fortified to the point of unspeakableness

"So, o.k.", sez this one guy who apparently had once read some revolutionary material, apparently, "So, o.k.", sez he, "Let's say that all Mens' consciousness is NOT equal, but then, o.k., what if those with the least, or even NONE are the only ones who ever discuss the subject of consciousness?"

This one handy-man once instructed his son thusly, "If anyone ever offers you any advice on how you should behave, pretend to listen closely, then open up your eyes REAL wide and ask them, 'Wow, if I DO all that then will I look like you?'"

Nother update: I now have further sufficient evidence to state that it is no worse for you to go outdoors

I recently attended a well publicized lecture by a well padded City thinker who concluded his remarks thusly,
"And I leave you with this, which IS perhaps the most pressing question of our day, does anyone know what I'm talking about?"

For all we take we must pay, but the prudent price is a joke, a laugh,

Those who stick out their tongues at Life likely have larger tongues at

Like everyone else, the Revolutionist HAS sufficient reasons for weakness and failure, but NO EXCUSES has He.

At least, thank god, there's no closing points at your death.

Come on, let's hear it now for all those who've never said "Come on, let's

If you like the music the volume's too low; if you don't, its too loud.

One ole City dude in considering how all religions condemn drinking said to himself, "You mean I can be common, dumb, and deluded, OR be common, dumb, deluded AND sober?" - Jeeze, what a set-up!"

Remember: Even 2 is a committee.

An ordinary Man sez, "I am I, and I HAVE a nervous system.", while a Revolutionist would express it in reverse.

...and Kyroot said:

A Revolutionist can never let the ordinary, mechanical pressures of life put Him even temporarily in the position of "not being on speaking terms" with Himself.

Do you ever figure Life's gotta be downright amazed at what Man will put up with?

Those who DO discuss the cost either can't afford it, or don't really want it.
