

...and Kyroot said:

In warm weather you don't need advice.

...and Kyroot said:

It's not really charity if it appears to be so.

...and Kyroot said:

One guy sez that the benefit of living in the City is that you get better at forgetting. (In the Bushes
the boon is in your increased ability to ignore.)

...and Kyroot said:

A Real Revolutionist has a secret handshake except no one's ever showed Him what it is.

...and Kyroot said:

If you're gonna go on and tell anybody what it is you might as well go ahead and break a circumference in two.

...and Kyroot said:

"I've told you all I can."

"Its not enough."

"I know."

...and Kyroot made them clarify:

"I've told you all I can."

"It doesn't SEEM to be enough."

"I know, I know."

...and Kyroot said:

It is possible that your parents COULD "know best", unless of course, they're actually YOUR particular parents.

...and Kyroot said:

If its not a rude awakening its NO awakening.

...and Kyroot said:

Hangnails don't count in the lifeboat.

...and Kyroot said:

Anyone who believes that two heads are better than one doesn't even have one.

...and Kyroot said:

Isn't it neat how ordinary ordinary reality is.

...and Kyroot said:

I started to say that you shouldn't do anything second handed, but everything they do in the City is second hand.

...and Kyroot said:

There might be some who could see from "here to there" if it weren't for all the distracting sights in between, (or even think to that distant place were it not for all the thoughts in between.)

...and Kyroot said:

Has Life ever had Men call one of their poets a "serious, potent voice of his age" who was not morbific, moss coated, and as pessimisti
as a banker on vacation?

...and Kyroot said:

Life goes on till the job gets done.

...and Kyroot said:

A Real Revolutionist doesn't listen to ANYbody...well, o.k., to Himself maybe,
but just a little.

...and Kyroot said:

Look at it this way then: Anything actually beyond the ability of Man to know
would be, perforce, mortally irrelevant. Feels much better, huh?

...and Kyroot said:

A Revolutionist should be an intellectual, and emotional omnivoire.

...and Kyroot said:

There's a lanky fellow who sometimes stays near the northern Cambodian border who sez he can
"deal with most problems,
insofar", he adds, "As any problem CAN, and should be dealt with."

...and Kyroot said:

Only the weak repent.