

...and Kyroot said:

In the City there are none so short but what dying won't increase their stature.

...and Kyroot said:

Heard this feller say he felt like he "got up on the wrong side of the day."

...and Kyroot said:

There IS a difference between a secret, and simply not talking about something

11/28/88-(4)

...and Kyroot said:

Remember this, Number 278: A guy's not necessarily famous just because you and he both THINK he is.

...and Kyroot said:

In a City emergency ward they recently admitted a Man with severely sprained lips; seems He heard, then tried to sing
the song, "I'm Gonna Live Until I Die", but He was convinced the title was backwards.

...and Kyroot said:

I heard yet another comment coming from that City Claims Department: "Look, just because I don't have a ticket doesn't mean I've got to take something."

11/28/88-(7)

...and Kyroot said:

You KNOW you've safely arrived in a City when you find the best known work of their most humorous poet is entitled, "Ode To A Dead Child."

...and Kyroot said:

Through a mix up in this machine I was trying out, I recently found myself in the staggering midst of some sort of City poetry festival, and before I could extricate myself I heard the following, from two gents who seemed to have been engaged in verbal combat:

"Chaucer, Shakspear, Milton, Blake,
What a souffle they would make.
English words and thoughts so dear,
Waitress, bring another beer."

And in return this bard received:

"Many's a poet who at this hour,
Spreads sad seeds and plows so dour.
Stand back folks and let 'er bloom,
No one's gettin' outa this room."

(I did not stay for the announcement of a victor.)

...and Kyroot said:

Unless you're just wastefully determined to use high test in a lawn mower,
always take the easy way out, (assuming of course,
 of course,
 that you can properly
 spot the ole greasy way.)

...and Kyroot said:

If its on the news it can't be used.

...and Kyroot said:

I would like to nominate the following comment I recently heard for this year's Safe Statement Award,
"Something must be left to chance."

...and Kyroot said:

If there is no word for it make one up; then don't tell anyone about it,
then forget it.

...and Kyroot said:

Guy said, "I've been in love, in debt, and in the bottle, and I must confess,
I DO have a preference."

...and Kyroot said:

I am disturbed by the similarity of the words, "brain", and "pain".

...and Kyroot said:

Never try and cash in the chips of your famousness unless you're really,
really ready to leave the game
for good...by way, I might add,
of lethal
disappointment.

...and Kyroot said:

Never get into "playing the dozens" if you only count to ten.

...and Kyroot said:

Remember this, said the first, "The Man guarding the gate is NOT the gate itself.", "Yeah", said number two, "But sometimes He might as WELL be.", " 'Yeah', your ass." came the coda.

...and Kyroot said:

A "load off your mind" just puts it on somebody else's.

...and Kyroot said:

Why is it that all the world's "Great Literature" seems to have already been written" Has the past, in some way,
been secretly acting
as those dead dudes'
agent?

...and Kyroot said:

Don't use your "legit" voice when sittin' in with the Isley Brothers.

...and Kyroot said:

There is this "one little thing" that everyone's forgot.