

...and Kyroot said:

One of the truly great, neat things about humans is like if you keep one penned up for a while with pigs
he'll begin to grunt.

(A singular, and potentially profitable trait indeedy.)

...and Kyroot said:

One fifthright City father told his equally so son, "Son, never think while someone ELSE is talking."

...and Kyroot said:

No need to berate, or perhaps even use, your own little memory, for what happened is whatever the king SAID happened.

...and Kyroot said:

Seeking help on the basis of appealing to another's humanity doesn't strike me as the best way to go about it.

...and Kyroot said:

Heard again, from that particular Claims Department I mentioned in the City,
the following declaration, "Yes,
I will admit that it IS a stalwart example of its type,
but its STILL not mine."

...and Kyroot said:

This guy asked, "Why is it that only dead people seem to have done the dead-on quotes?"

...and Kyroot said:

One reason all City religions offer a mediator between their god and Man
is to help insulate them
from such immediate disappointments.

...and Kyroot said:

You can put this to music, and hum along with it later: A local genius ain't much of a genius.

...and Kyroot said:

I am disturbed by the similarity of the words, "serious", and "delirious".

12/2/88-(10)

...and Kyroot said:

In the City EVERYthing's "a.k.a."

...and Kyroot said:

One secretive Camp-follower reportedly once said that he was pretty well
convinced that the only evil
was indecisiveness.

...and Kyroot said:

If your City has established, specific minimums, and maximums remember,
they're wrong, and non-operational.

...and Kyroot said:

Is Sampson remembered for his hair, or for its loss?

...and Kyroot said:

If you're gonna stay long in the City forget integrity...in fact forget even
the definition thereof...come to think of it better,
don't even admit you
ever heard the word.

...and Kyroot said:

If you won't think I'm talking about literature, or the theatre, I'll tell you something, o.k.? O.k.
Don't be Romeo if you
ain't got a Juliette.

...and Kyroot said:

Life periodically produces exceptional people simply because It can't do any better.

...and Kyroot said:

Not to necessarily give-you-the-blues, (although if you stay where you're standing you may deserve 'em), but it could be that all City activity is ultimately just "busy work."

...and Kyroot said:

Can an ordinary Man be truly "smart" unless at least one other person says he is?

...and Kyroot said:

A City poet declared, "Without melancholy there IS no Philosophy.", and a bemused passer-by mused, "If true,
that explains a lot,
regarding at least,
Philosophy."

...and Kyroot said:

He knows enough who knows the king.