

...and Kyroot said:

Humanity seems generally inclined to historically remember best those who have kicked it
around.

...and Kyroot said:

One Man marvelling over what He called the "hidden, mystical meaning in every day affairs" challenged us thusly, "Do you realize that term 'Divine Light' is contained in the word 'compassion' if you add a 'd', a 'v', l, g, h", and a 't'?"

...and Kyroot said:

Upon assuming the position of outré orchestra leader, one Revolutionist immediately assured one and two, I mean, all, that He would "take all requests", but He proved to then ignore same, post haste.

...and Kyroot said:

In the City it's still difficult for them to remember that by their own
definitions, laws and principles
that facts are derived from reality, not the other way
around.

...and Kyroot said:

One revolutionist influenced fellow decided to open a school to teach intelligence; it seemed so natural, so obvious, so correct; then, being relatively bright himself, he suddenly realized what a dumb idea it was.

...and Kyroot said:

There's this other guy who presently stays over in the Fourth Ward who knows a story he's never told anyone.

...and Kyroot said:

From a certain view you could say that a Real Revolutionist is the only one with an "In-Doors" that is self-furnished.

...and Kyroot said:

Heard a City cafe-critic declare to his coffee-fed-comrades, "You know why
they can't decide who actually wrote Shakespear's stuff?, you wanna know why?, huh?, huh?...I'll
tell you why,
cause
NOBODY did,
that's
why."

...and Kyroot said:

Anyone who gets impressed deserves it...
yeah I know, needs it.

...and Kyroot said:

One chap confided to me that the reason we do not have more "fitting conclusions" now-a-days is because of a
dearth of decent
fitting rooms.

...and Kyroot said:

Under City Game Rules, anything that "sees" itself doesn't like itself.

...and Kyroot said:

Talk about efficiency, how about how things are arranged for the dead to entertain the children.

...and Kyroot said:

At a dubious lecture in the City, one hot-haired Man suddenly leaped to someone's feet and
exclaimed, "The Ten Lost
Tribes are not ALL lost,
at least seven of
them are in MY head."

...and Kyroot said:

I am disturbed by the similarity of the words "inspired", and 'insipid."

...and Kyroot said:

One Man announced that he was going to sell his beautiful, successful merry-go-round, and one of his friends could scarcely believe it, and attempted to
question him on the matter,
but was quickly told, "Oh, its
not for the reason
you THINK."

...and Kyroot said:

In a land where the reporters become as important as the events they report,
the experiences of the People MAY become as important as the means of their reporting. "Hey, its a circular jungle
out there, a
place where hangmen often
fly up through
trap doors.)

...and Kyroot said:

Never trust a god who's doing his memoirs.

...and Kyroot said:

Irony is anger in a velvet tux.

...and Kyroot said:

For a few I offer the following as a new potential nourishment in a deep, personal relationship: You don't tell
me your troubles,
and I won't tell
you mine.

...and Kyroot said:

Unless you're embroiled in some weird, time-wasting contest, never waste
your time calling the City a liar.

...and Kyroot said:

A wise father counseled his son thusly, "Look kid, life's o.k., but there's no need to make a career out of it."