

...and Kyroot said:

If problems don't happen on time they cease to be problems. -

...and Kyroot said:

A Real Revolutionist is a person who can give Himself a hand while simultaneously bowing.

...and Kyroot said:

I met this one guy who said that on City applications He would list His vocation as "Apprentic Dolt.", (and in less secular circumstances simply as "Lay Idiot".)

...and Kyroot said:

To a Revolutionist its all the same, except for the parts that's not.

...and Kyroot said:

There is this other City park philosopher, who evidently has had some revolutionary exposure, who recently pronounced the following: "If the position of truth and error, good and evil were any closer priests would be intellectually door dinged, and philosophers would be chain link installers.."

After a few minutes of silence as we surveyed our quiet surrounds He added, "If dead stood any nearer to life we'd all have the willies even on weekends."

...and Kyroot said:

If the Biblical deluge had been of words, and not water, what then might Noah have taken aboard?

...and Kyroot said:

Read a City poet who said that "the surest way to a woman's heart is by way of pity"; it must have worked since Men have adopted a similar tack
regarding their gods.

(What will humans
think of next...
if anything.)

...and Kyroot said:

One harried City-ite confided to me that during one especially restless night he heard his brain say to him not to worry, that it was "just passing through."

...and Kyroot said:

Everyone's about the same distance away..(unless you're doing it wrong again.)

...and Kyroot said:

Last weekend at that little tavern just off the main City park, I overheard this gent at a nearby table announce, "Well at least I do not engage in exaggerated claims; in fact I make fewer exaggerated claims than any man, woman, or priest who's ever lived at any time or place in history."

...and Kyroot said:

My kinda sports: A team that decided 3rd base was a waste of time, 4th down an unnecessary bother.

...and Kyroot said:

In the City only the incomplete will satisfy.

O.k.then, let's get right to the marrow of the matter then:

In the City only the unsatisfying
will satisfy.

...and Kyroot said:

To forge the correct, and necessary inner power structure the Revolutionist must adopt the operational attitude of, "If I said it,
I can do it."

...and Kyroot said:

There's this chap in Geneva who's been partially lamed by the falling collected works of Robert Browning, who sez he knows the private number for Room Service for the whole world.
(He adds that it shuts down at nine.)

...and Kyroot said:

A Real Revolutionist is extremely weird...no, strike "weird".

...and Kyroot said:

Overheard a fellow say that since he's gotten involved in certain Revolutionist activities he's become so pleased and pressure packed that he's forgotten why he got involved in the first place.

...and Kyroot said:

If you treat all ideas the same they'll return the favor.

If you'll treat all beliefs the same you won't need favors.

...and Kyroot said:

A Real Revolutionist is a person who can spell any word any way they want to.

...and Kyroot said:

In the City library, day before sometime, after several hours of deep reading in the area of ancient and modern matters metaphysical, and spiritual, a man stood sweatily to his feet, and loudly proclaimed, "Intensity without intelligent direction is the way of the Gumby Warrior."

...and Kyroot said:

A Real Revolutionist never uses the same material once.