

...and Kyroot said:

Ordinary life is a series of uncompleted conclusions.

...and Kyroot said:

Ordinary life is a series of uncompleted conclusions.

...and Kyroot said:

A Real Revolutionist is one who would rule, or ruin, (His own state, that is.)

...and Kyroot said:

A Real Revolutionist knows what time it is even when time's run out.

...and Kyroot said:

With the proper intensity you wouldn't care if gas stations were open late or not...
(a matter of fuel
availability,
don't you see.)

...and Kyroot said:

On one non-particular level, war can be seen as the ultimate purveyor of the complex inthat the more simplistic are always defeated.

...and Kyroot said:

There was this rich guy who hired other people to read for him...no, wait, he had this evil twin brother who was really so rich he paid people to think for him...no, wait; really, REALLY rich guys would pay someone else to LIVE for them.

...and Kyroot said:

As I have noted for you, crimes not known are no crimes at all, but muse on its more complex twin brother, to wit: Crimes freely, and publicly proclaimed seem to also cease being crimes.

...and Kyroot said:

The Big Games are for the Big Boys.

...and Kyroot said:

Lots of People become religious once all other options are exhausted...

(like I once said, "Why'dya think they call it
'small talk'.")

...and Kyroot said:

There is this urban anthropologist who sez he's discovered a heretofore unknown female tribe secretly living in the basement of the Vogue magazine building whose economy is based on the bartering of Sweet & Low.

...and Kyroot said:

In that City coffee house, in a back booth, I overheard this one chap claim that the proper way to read poetry was from the last line forward to the first, "Try it.", he said, ("No comment.", say I.)

...and Kyroot said:

There's this one guy on the Slovakian side of the Carpathians who sez he's got everybody's number.

(He has a three-fourth's brother on the Check side who similarly claims to have everybody down pat.)

...and Kyroot said:

All institutions, organizations, clubs, and mobs tend to annoy Revolutionist intelligence.

...and Kyroot said:

Don't look for enlightenment in a suitcase:....oh, go ahead.

...and Kyroot said:

After a certain leg of the journey, and from a certain passing view, a Revolutionist could say, "You know, I'm now the kinda
person I used to hate,
and laugh at.", and
like all real good stuff, this is so
no matter who you are,
were, or may become.

...and Kyroot said:

When one guy was queered on his apparent lack of friends, he replied,
"I'm not into strangers."

...and Kyroot said:

All religions have some notion of a final day of judgement wherein "The dead shall live, and the living shall die.", is that not what THIS is about — NOW!

...and Kyroot said:

One fellow said that all he really hoped to accomplish was to get to the place where he was "just out of range."

...and Kyroot said:

A Real Revolutionist is both rare, AND well done.