There's this certain game that's totally unknown to the City, I call it:

The Less You Say

The Less You Pay.

When it comes to matters more important, and complex than mere fiscal ones remember this approach: When they present the check, try and leave town....(not alone,
of course,
take the bill with you.)

In the City are many signs and arrows saying, "One Flight Up", and one guy mused, "Most people here ain't GOT one flight up."

People only talk so much because they have to.

...and Kyroot said:

Never answer a question that someone really wants you to.

Almost every situation can turn out "O.k." if you don't care how most situations turn out.

There's this one old dude with a linoleum mustache who may live near Buenos Aires who sez that no matter what they're called, or how they're performed, all dances throughout the world are just crude variations of the tango, and he adds that HE'S not fooled for a moment.

Even though your mother told you not to keep making ugly faces cause it could get stuck like that and you found out that wasn't so, don't be so sure regarding uncomely thoughts.

In the City if they ask you to take a urine test, tell 'em you'll go 'em one better.
