I met this guy whose ears could talk, and what they had to say I can't repeat in mixed company.

There is a difference between "having a problem", and "thinking you have one".
(and a Revolutionist never thinks of such,)

Remember that around-the-corner approach to New Intelligence: To think ABOUT something, not think ON it.

(Although things may apparently overlap near their centers, they can also do so in the surrounding areas.)

The Revolutionist knows clearly that the fastest, cleanest way to all power and wealth is through reduction, if not elimination of competition. . .(all other approaches
are chump
schemes).

One's ingrown sense-of-self is the ultimate insulation from having to change.

The ever viable, all encompassing, dancing dynamics of two-eyed-sight in a 3-D dance hall is pleasantly contained in those ever popular, opposing political slogans, "Its Time For A Change", versus, and combined with, "There's No Substitute For Experience."

In a 3-D world, time becomes the ultimate measurement; now what might you imagine the situation
to be in a 4-D realm?

If it weren't FOR the lag between ordinary talk, and action there would BE no action.

You can certainly blame the king for all your losses, even praise him for your gains, but so what?...I mean it - but SO WHAT!

. . .and Kyroot said:

All ordinary thought is a kind of intellectual trompe l'oeil.

In a 3-D world, all power structures seem to first come about through some foreign intervention; think on that; think on that as you hold, and ponder the affairs-of-state of your own skull.

In the City its not so much a matter of things "being as they are", as it is of things being PARTIALLY
"as they are."

"Oh, I love it.", "I hate it.", "Oh, I didn't notice.": Are these the true
limits of choices?,
the best,
the worst,
the unnoticed?

One guy's partner used to sometimes tell the other one, "Hey, remember this,
if it wasn't for me
there'd BE no you."

Those who complete this uprising are history's most unusual rebellion:
A successful revolution,
and a new government, but with out the destruction of the old one.

A Real Revolutionist isn't bound by ANY thing,
(much less, Himself.)
