

...and Kyroot said:

A Man with no particular interest in what He's doing can take a particular interest in what He's doing.

...and Kyroot said:

A Real Explorer should use His latest intellectual discoveries to immediately help finance new explorations.

...and Kyroot said:

Don't look now, but it doesn't HAVE to gain on you.

...and Kyroot said:

Rugged intellectual needs shouldn't be dressed from Fredrick's of Hollywood.

...and Kyroot said:

A City dude, with limited poetic abilities nonetheless offered up the following vexed-verse-view,
"Rhymes without meters are Saints without Peters... or Pauls."

...and Kyroot said:

In the old-world, playing "catch up" won't catch you up.

...and Kyroot said:

Don't give just any ole voice a sporting chance until you know what its sport is.

...and Kyroot said:

The meat of "unjustly accused" is always short-weighted.

...and Kyroot said:

A Real Explorer shouldn't resemble the past.

...and Kyroot said:

All history is revisionist history...

(but whose genetic memory is orderly enough to recall otherwise.)

...and Kyroot said:

Old-world intelligence, in looking for explanations of Man's behavior have followed tracks going from gods, to ignorance, to will, to motivations, and now oftentimes wanna find a new ticket window.

...and Kyroot said:

Hey, remember: When it rains it rains.

...and Kyroot said:

Another guy used to tell himself, "Hey, don't look at me like that."

...and Kyroot said:

Where else can fragmented maps lead but to partial places.

...and Kyroot said:

Within the moves of a two party dance there is never enough info forthcoming to determine the overall choreography.

...and Kyroot said:

That completed has no opposition.

...and Kyroot said:

If a "bad habit" is not all bad it IS no habit.

...and Kyroot said:

If you still think about something you did you didn't do it right. Right?

. . .and Kyroot said:

Revolutionists who eventually become conquerers are never in the "outcome business."

All results are dead-ends.

...and Kyroot said:

Wants are relatively new... and should be kept that way.