If you're going to stoop low enough to accept an award, at least be sure it's a "prestigious award."

One thing about "belief systems" - they're all user-hungry.

...and Kyroot said:

Over on this other planet they found a guy who told his own nervous system,
"Listen, if you're gonna get mad, do it fast, and do it hard, then even faster - forget it."

One chap's advice is, if you're going to repeat yourself at least act like you didn't notice.

In this other area I once visited, what is said about art is of no significance, and what is said about music is of very little; what is said about all other subjects falls somewhere in-between.

One voice said, "Hey, we don't have to take this.", and another replied,
"Yes we do.", and the first one said,
"Hey, you don't count, you're the same voice."

...and Kyroot said:

The rallying cry of this one planet was, "We don't need no rallying cry."

...and Kyroot said:

Ah don't worry, you can read about it later.

On that curious looking planet over there, what people think they said is what they actually said.

...and Kyroot said:

"It's pretty complicated in here."

"It's pretty complicated out here."

"Wanna swap places?"

"Would it help?"

"If I knew that I wouldn't BE in here."
