

...and Kyroot said:

To be extraordinary you must REMAIN extraordinary.

...and Kyroot said:

Once you grasp the substance behind the word "problem" any idea of "solutions"
becomes pretty well forgotten.

...and Kyroot said:

A person I met in the Fourth Expansion Zone told me that their most satisfying hobby was "not talking about themselves."

...and Kyroot said:

If it seems like the light is always in the wrong place, you may be in the wrong place.

...and Kyroot said:

There is an enigmatic unification in pursuing a never ending revolution.

...and Kyroot said:

What visible authority could ever be infallible, other than perhaps, one that doesn't give a goddam.

...and Kyroot said:

I understand that some creatures of the M-V sector were astounded to learn that on Earth "wishful thinking" was condemned.

...and Kyroot said:

If you don't call out their name how do they know you're there?

If you don't call out their name how do you know they're there?

If you don't call out their name how do they know they're^{*}there?, and almost lastly,

If you don't call out their name how do you know you're there?

Now do you finally see the super importance
of having a name.

...and Kyroot said:

The philosophers in this one softer galaxy have as their main focus of attention mans' continuing fascination with explanations
and descriptions of the known.

...and Kyroot said:

Just saying, "It won't help.", won't help.

...and Kyroot said:

Question: What is more obvious than things hot, or cold?

Answer: Things hot.

...and Kyroot said:

One intrepid explorer told me that the extreme thrill of extreme travel
was in meeting people who were un-meetable.

...and Kyroot said:

I must agree, there is no doubt: Far away, and long ago things were older, and more distant.

...and Kyroot said:

Over in one of the denser territories, I once ran across a warning sign that read, "Stay Away From The Sleep Wall."

...and Kyroot said:

If a revolution expands beyond the boundaries of its home planet, it is then called something else.

(This can also happen to you.)

...and Kyroot said:

Have any Earth persons yet noticed that it is only at very, very particular times that they tell themselves
"Not to worry."

and Kyroot said:

By a curious skid-of-events, the atmosphere on this one planet makes it impossible to ever be late.
(I understand they have a waiting list of would-be emigres.)

...and Kyroot said:

Heard one guy say that his first thought was always his best one, and that's why everybody gets his second one.

...and Kyroot said:

A lesson in extraterrestrial economics: Heard this mid-way distant creature proclaim, "Having a Ferrari is no crime, paying for it is."

...and Kyroot said:

And on this one last planet you could get a copyright on your own life...
of course it had to be original.