

...and Kyroot said: •

So that you won't get too discouraged, I will tell you that there is at least one place in this <sup>Universe</sup>
universe where people who say they "don't wanna talk about"
can:

...and Kyroot said:

After his initial exposure to several spectator sports, one fellow stood on one leg, raised an arm up and said, "What I'd now like to know is, where are the referees and umpires in the game of life"...let me clue you in; even though he said he'd like to know -- he really doesn't.

...and Kyroot said:

In this one zone I passed through they won't allow a countdown unless a blast-off is forthcoming.

...and Kyroot said:

In the future people won't have to study the past under a nom de plume.

...and Kyroot said:

If you tried to call everyone by their proper job description your social life would likely suffer therefrom.

...and Kyroot said:

Those who call today the "Age of Information", and consider this a sign of their intelligence,
just reveals the quality of the information they're receiving.

...and Kyroot said:

While buffeted by the flow of everyday events one ole supreme sorehead
would sometimes mutter,
"I couldn't be less pleased even if I actually WERE less pleased."

...and Kyroot said:

The further you get from your own locality the more songs you hear.

...and Kyroot said:

A certain non-renowned thinker on Planet Arid, when confronted with a particularly viscid question would rejoin the inquiring party by saying, "Put that in a digital form and I'll consider it."

...and Kyroot said:

One real ugly guy stood up and said, "I resent being called ugly in print."

...and Kyroot said:

In some galaxies that won't have words that don't mean anything...
(some galaxies are not as far anyway as you might think.)

...and Kyroot said:

In certain parts of the universe density is held in higher esteem than in others.

...and Kyroot said:

A language that has itself as its only point of reference is a self renewing resource in a shoebox.

...and Kyroot said:

In some districts of the universe the opposite of talking about something is not hearing about it.

...and Kyroot said:

If you can get back down from there you weren't very high to start with.

...and Kyroot said:

From a more enriched local view, the silliness of it all is the reality of it all.

...and Kyroot said:

After overhearing remarks regarding people "talking to themselves" this one ole dude thought, "Boy, that wouldn't do for me, for as hostile as I am I'd sure nough end up in an armed confrontation with myself." After a further bit of pondering he also thought, "And hell, no matter who won I'd for sure regret it."

...and Kyroot said:

In this one time zone a fellow said, "Reality is the totality of facts,
not things", and a cohort injected,
"Reality is the totality of thought,
not facts", and a third guy, obviously either in a hurry, or on to something,
added, "Reality is the totality."

...and Kyroot said:

"Out there" is someone else's play; "in here" is our intrusion into the proceedings.

...and Kyroot said:

Looking back can make you GO back.