

...and Kyroot said:

Indubitable Fact Of The Day: Small mines produce small pay loads.

Ah ha n, pardon me, but
are you saying "mines",
m-i-n-e-s, like in "gold mines",
or m-i-n-d-s "minds"?

Right!

...and Kyroot said:

Upon hearing repeated references to people "talking to themselves", one high blown chap thought with some disbelief, and even more disdain,

"My dear Aunt Eloise,
what would I EVER have
to say to my inferiors!"

...and Kyroot said:

Backstage the same old boring gossip rolls on.

...and Kyroot said:

First voice: "There's a difference between talking-smart, and BEING smart.", and his brother replied, "May be, but not much.", and the first voice said, "Yeah, but there's still SOME difference, right?", and the brother stood silently, squinting one eye and scratching his chin til the first voice again insisted, " Right?", and the brother said, "I'm thinking, I'm thinking!"

...and Kyroot said:

If you actually "did it" no excuse, or explanation is necessary.

...and Kyroot said:

Super-serial-justice-is-still-persuasive, example number forty-seven:

In a near-distant, unnoted
conflict, one side sealed,
and secured themselves behind
a barricade and defiantly proclaimed their position, and intransigence by declaring, "This will mark our stand, and 'tis
here we are prepared to die.",
and the other side thought,
"Well how simply perfect,
for 'tis there we're equally prepared to kill you."....

...and they all lived
ever afterward - sort
of.

...and Kyroot said:

There was this one guy, at this one time, in this one place, (all the details of which I shall not dignify by describing), after having some exposure to the type of information inherent in activities such as this wrapped it up to his satisfaction by the following comment,

"It's air conditioning
for the mind."

...and Kyroot said:

This one guy I met wanted me to present the following question to the proper authorities, and pertinent parties I might encounter along my merry way, so here comes his poser - now you kids stand back away from the radio, o.k., here it is, he asks:

"If certain info does not appear to be 'user friendly' are we to conclude the fault lies with the data, or with the potential customer?"

...and Kyroot said:

One guy on a certain one-guy-journey came to yet another fucking bend-in-the-road and suddenly thought to himself, "Hey, I don't need most of this shit.", and one of his brother's voices slapped him on the forehead and said, "My god, man, you can't think things like that!", and he slapped himself back and said, "That's the very kind of shit I'as talking about."

...and Kyroot said:

Portion of a conversation overheard somewhere,

First Voice: "Garbage doesn't smell."

Second One: "You're crazy, it always stinks."

First again: "No, I mean it has no sense OF smell so as to detect the presence
of other garbage."

Second Voice: "Huh? I don't get the point."

First Voice: "Well, let me try it
this way: The simplistic don't smell."

"Huh?"

"Forget it."

...and Kyroot said:

One chap with some semi-solid insight into himself recently declared that what he liked about the change-of-seasons is the fact that it doesn't change anything.

...and Kyroot said:

For those still pondering the relative merits of verbal assualts versus physical attacks, consider this proverb from a certain planet I don't wanna talk about, and it says: "Being shouted down in the middle of the battlefield is no disgrace; being SHOT down however, will go on your permanent record."

(...enough said, right?

Bang,bang,

babble,

babble.)

...and Kyroot said:

One fellow, in a fit of satirical neural patriotism cried out,
"I regret that I have
but one brain to give
to my country.", and
his brain said, "YOU regret?"

...and Kyroot said:

If tis true, as one planet would have it that, "Those who say don't know.",
what does this also note
about those who listen?

...and Kyroot said:

One ole timer said that he could wrap up all the wisdom and experience of his years in one sentence, "Don't wait for a train in the bus station.", and both Amtrack and Greyhound feigned amazement at the old codger's wasted life.

...and Kyroot said:

Another of the details uponwhich you may safely depend: Any mortal system that claims its version of reality is the single valid one is at LEAST as primitive and simplistic as your present one.

...and Kyroot said:

More complex, revolutionist information can be identified by its natural grace.

...and Kyroot said:

Heard another fellow say that no matter his many, and several short comings, one distinct benefit of being himself was that no matter what time it is he's already home.

...and Kyroot said:

Be advised: All City employees are overpaid and underworked - and in some cases it's even worse,
the reverse is true.

...and Kyroot said:

Life once mused to Itself, "Once they catch on, EVERYbody'll be wanting to do it."