

...and Kyroot said:

Those who seriously speak of "mans' uncertain destiny" unconditionally ~~establish their own -~~ at least intellectually.

...and Kyroot said:

To be unknown is to be part grown.

...and Kyroot said:

Whilest out on a beguiling stroll, through an enchanting woods, with his two charming sons, a father suddenly spoke to them thusly,
"If she'll show you her ankle she'll show you her knee, and if she'll show you her knee she'll show you her thigh.", and after they had walked for a while more one of the boys asked the other one, "Was the old man talking about sex?"

...and Kyroot said:

The real cowards of this world are not simply those of physical timidity, but are rather, those afraid
to think-the-new.

...and Kyroot said:

There are no ant secrets to an aardvark.

...and Kyroot said:

Additional Strenuous Science, (sub, physics & math): Although two ratios may be the same, if their size difference reaches a certain point the human intellect will perceive the ratios to have diverged.

...and Kyroot said:

This mechanic I met says that "death continues to interfere with man arriving at some, certain mathematical certainties, for instance, now we'll never know if Beethoven's Tenth would have been twice as good as his Fifth."

...and Kyroot said:

Another devinity expressed certain of his feelings toward the craft by saying that one of the "neat things about being a god is that once you're real famous when people interview you they never ask what in your past you regret most."

...and Kyroot said:

Institutional crime IS no crime.

...and Kyroot said:

One fully ripened ole sore head was heard to remark that in "casting about for answers most people came up with anchovies".

...and Kyroot said:

A friendly dietian I danced with, attempting, I suspect to waltz her way even closer to the area of terpsichorean certainty, confided to my nearest ear that, "The words most commonly misspelled, and mispronounced are seldom those words seldomly used".

...(I could have dannnced
all night,
dannnced
all night.)

...and Kyroot said:

Those who hate the gods mistrust the kings, and the anti-royalists are everywhere the spine of the revolution.

...and Kyroot said:

A real dummy will always hire his brother-in-law.

...and Kyroot said:

When the plague hit, all who were not dying from it were talking about it, (except for a few who could see beyond the horizon of the clock).

...and Kyroot said:

Only the simplistic think that they should be where their brain is at all times.

...and Kyroot said:

One earth-birther thinker-cum-cynic posed, then answered the following query, "What is the greatest example of the triumph of order over chaos? Is it good over evil?, light over darkness? No, I say, it is the mastery of the state over the people, for once the 'order' of the bureaucracy is in place it will spawn it's own new generation of chaos."

...and Kyroot said:

Some more of my mortal correspondance: Dear Kyroot: Some of what you say is so obvious and down to earth as to be almost routine, then at other times it sounds spooky as hell.
Signed, D.R.

Dear D.R.:
Same to ya.

...and Kyroot said:

Over on that busy, blue planet, one economist made his semi-permanent mark by the following notation, "Just like stairs,
prices go up,
and
prices go down,
but they never go away."

...and Kyroot said:

A little after ten-thirty last evening, coming from not too far away,
I heard the following little sing-along:

"Genes 'll make you fat,
• Genes 'll make you thin,
Genes 'll make you lose, and Genes 'll make you win.

Oh,
Genes 'll bring you up, and Genes 'll take you out,
They 'll do anything but,
Admit what they're about."

...and Kyroot said:

When the unprovable becomes undeniable, maps become living guides.