

...and Kyroot said:

Apparently by way of some encouragement, if not correction, one father told a daughter, "Just remember, you can 'sing' the blues without having the blues.", and she was suddenly struck, "What a joy it is to live in a flawed reality."

...and Kyroot said:

Its only since humans became involved that "justification" got a bad name.

...and Kyroot said:

On this one planet they always let everyone else do the "ground work".

...and Kyroot said:

In this one, I'll admit, unusual state, the king, each morning, immediately upon arising
would gleefully proclaim,
"The king is dead,
I know he's dead,
Long live the king."

...and Kyroot said:

One little feller was so intrigued by the activities of his own brain that he gave it it's own little latin name, Ubiquitous Non Sequitur.

...and Kyroot said:

With a wide sweep of his arms, the richly endowed elder said,
"All of this, my lad, is what we call 'life', and we're all in it together.", and his less empowered listerner said, "But some more than others."

...and Kyroot said:

After being confronted yet again, (for the four thousandth time by his reckoning) with the ballyhooed glitz and glamour of celebrities' lives this one chap muttered that at times his own seemed to be no more than "stock footage".

...and Kyroot said:

One purpose of memory and history is to get sequence in proper order.

...and Kyroot said:

On a certain vaguely familiar, if not redoubtable world, their term,
"To make new friends" means to
"beat up strangers".

...(but its beyond
me why you called it
"vaguely familiar"..)

...and Kyroot said:

One somewhat large little fellow who had recently come to believe that he was "held by the heady grip of love" discovered that he was wearing his shorts too tight.

...and Kyroot said:

Longevity favors the silly gods.

...and Kyroot said:

One day the Leading Voice told the Trailing one, "You may find, if not the inside track at least a dry, level one if you but finally discover that no one else is EVER going to think that you're as exceptionally bright as you know you to be...and this be so no matter who, when or where."

...and Kyroot said:

In a bounding fit of hurried optimism, the creatures of that one young planet to our east have just radified an amendment outlawing fate.

...and Kyroot said:

"Dear Pa Pa, just what IS the difference between those men who never give any particular thought to their existence, and those who seemed consumed by such?", and the old man replied, "Well, for one thing, the former never ask such questions as this, and beyond that...well, I'll have to get back with you on it."

...and Kyroot said:

Grey Matter Graffiti To Remember, (if you want to); If a Revolutionist hears an idea he doesn't like he should have someone at camp, qualified and with a sharp knife, check his hearing.

...and Kyroot said:

I ask you my friends, fellow creatures, and other voters, just what kind of world and state would we have if it finally comes down but to two parties? - those who pray for rain, and those who pray for umbrellas?"

...and Kyroot said:

There is only one thing more foolish than trying to tell other men how to live, and that is in trying to tell them how foolish it is.

...and Kyroot said:

No need to concern yourself with questions as to what cuisine is in,
or what styles are hot cause year in and year out, to a lion a Rembrandt is just another meal.

...and Kyroot said:

In partial counterpoint to Milky Way thinking, one galaxy holds with the following definitions;
"Art; Recognition of the inevitable,
Science; Wishful thinking."

...and Kyroot said:

Only tomorrow is better than you.