

...and Kyroot said:

On this one uncommonly,unchivalrous planet, one chap's family coat of arms held the motto,
"When the cost is of consequence, ignore
the source."

...and Kyroot said:

One more of our faceless heard of ole soreheads averred, "If ordinary men
were as tacky
and tasteless as
our heroes we'd
have neither."

...and Kyroot said:

One of the speakers proclaimed, "What need I of a villain so long as I have me.", and someone in the crowd opined, "That's a pretty ambiguous comment.", and the speaker pointed to his rejoinder and declared, "And so, the creeping face of larceny raps at our unsuspecting door.", and as he drifted away the voice in the crowd thought, "I gotta give him credit, I didn't think obscurity could BE amplified."

...and Kyroot said:

At a reception on another world I overheard one being tell it's counterpart, "I only feel sentimental just before I die."

...and Kyroot said:

One lumpy father told his equally swelte off spring, "Springer, if you're gonna rely on just one thing in life be sure its the RIGHT thing.", and the kid thought, "Another thing I like about the ole man is that he won't hesitate to bet on the obvious when its a fast track, and he knows the jockey."

...and Kyroot said:

One little musically mangled man liked to refer to his own thinking skills as, "my intellectual divertimento."

...and Kyroot said:

First verse to A Song With An Uncertain Chorus; "If you can think fast enough you don't have to think all that much.",
Second Verse; "If you
can think enough your
speed is of no importance!
Third Verse; "The first
two verses are
fatally flawed."

...and Kyroot said:

I am acquainted with this one man who says that one of the great joys of his life is in "reading to his son", now there are three curious aspects to this; First, I can assure you that what he said is the absolute truth, and the other two things are that he is illiterate, and childless.

...and Kyroot said:

The first voice said, "Sometimes when I get alone and think of me I almost cry.", and his sibling voice asked, "Out of loneliness?, sadness?", "No - disbelief."

...and Kyroot said:

Sometimes hot questions have cool answers...

and yeah, sometimes hot
questions aren't all that hot.

...and Kyroot said:

On some worlds everyone's still "looking for the messiah", but no one wants to see him coming.

...and Kyroot said:

Thus spaketh the noun, "If religion was psychology things would be different.", and the verb said, "If thinking was action things would be different.", and an adverbial in-law injected, "Shucks, ya'll, if things were different things would be different."

...and Kyroot said:

One middle aged planet wrote to his young satellite, away at school,
"If you suspect they may also ask someone else, never give your first opinion...

...P.S.; They'll always ask someone else's opinion."

...and Kyroot said:

An imaginary New Space minister exhorted his feckless flock just so,
"No need, my friends, to worry yourselves over the loose, gossiping tongues
of your human neighbors,
cause after you're dead,
history'll talk about
everybody."

...and Kyroot said:

I heard tell of this one, still-trying-to-find-itself planet, whereon
they have a masked,
silver screen hero known
by the handle of,
"El Perhaps-0".

...and Kyroot said:

May I be allowed the pleasure to "assume" that by now many of you, when you hear the word, "opposite" think in its stead such symbols as, "counterpart", and "collaborator".

...(May I have this small comfort?)

...and Kyroot said:

One guy, paddling about in a stream off the main thinking river,
reached over the side,
splashed a little water
in his face and announced
to his by-then, non existant
troops, "You know, if you had a 'real good'
plan you wouldn't
even have to go on."

...and Kyroot said:

"Although I am indeed", proclaimed this one chap, "Pleased to have learned that the species is spacious enough for all individuals, and the universal big enough for all localities, my supreme delight is in discovering that I am large enough for all my me's."

...and Kyroot said:

One who can see far away, (dimensionally speaking), might plot a map covering time, not space, and one anxious for a grand excursion might be able to chemically translate such a document.

...and Kyroot said:

No need to arise any earlier for a good parade route spot for the
triumphant armies
are passing right
through you.