

10/23/89-(1) ●

...and Kyroot said:

A Real Revolutionist takes all available information as MIS-information.

...and Kyroot said:

Part of criticism's job is to furnish the feel of continuity...

...you remember
"continuity" - the
illusion that history's
all stuck together.

...and Kyroot said:

Fat is ungrateful.

...and Kyroot said:

One guy's planetary, planning advice, "Invest your resources where they'll do the most good;
In the next decade,
growth will be THE growth industry."

...and Kyroot said:

Apparently by way of attempting to explain something or other, this one chap with sweaty brow, and wringing hands sort of sobbed, "It's come to this - I'm down to my last brother!"

...and Kyroot said:

In all visible constellations with those familiar dimensions - the unknown
forever reigns supreme.

...and Kyroot said:

This other guy assures me indubitably, that he is "so in favor of fun"
that he even periodically tries to have some.

...and Kyroot said:

The Question Of The Day, (soup not included): Is human knowledge discovered, invented, or imported?

...and Kyroot said:

On this one planet there is talk of abolishing the normal lag time between action, and thinking-of-action.

...and Kyroot said:

The ultimate, operational definition of the word "virtual" is in accepting the voice saying, "I" AS I.

...and Kyroot said:

The inevitable response to a stabbing is to bleed; the proper response to a fear of stabbing is a subversive brain smile.

...and Kyroot said:

(Another example of the frustrations of neural-home-ownership), Answer the following; Which of the statements is the correct one?, "The basement's flooded - quick, call a plumber.", or "Whoa, the basement's flooded - call the roofers."

...(On many planets mental-rental has become the way to go.)

...and Kyroot said:

Those who still believe that "man is a sham of his former self", should,
(as they will), speak for themselves.

...and Kyroot said:

One fine day the old man took the kid aside and said, "You have long been asking me what life means to man, and now's as good a time for me to respond as will be next friday, so listen up; Human life is...life is either a test, or a punishment...oh, add, a laboratory; Life is either a test, a punishment, or a laboratory...yeah...well, you could add to that that it's also possibly an opportunity... an opportunity, or a joke...Now we've got it; Life is either a test, a punishment, a laboratory, an opportunity, or a joke...yeah but it could also be a sport, so add sport to the list, and that'll about wrap it up, (except to add that it could also be either irrelevant, or unfathomable)... Ah, forget it kid, run on out d play."

...and Kyroot said:

Can there be strength without energy?

...and Kyroot said:

Over in this other solar system the creatures have begun receiving radio messages from the deep area of space wherein they think their gods are located, and it repeats over and over these words, "Confirm, confirm; please confirm."

...and Kyroot said:

Over in the sixty-fourth-sector, at a recent social gathering there was this one chap wandering about with a little sign nailed, (or perhaps, taped) to his forehead which said,
"Party Brain: Celebrating Twenty Years In Bizness."

...and Kyroot said:

Talking is the attempt to LEARN to talk.

(...and Kyroot added:

I could make some related comment regarding thinking, but by the time an ordinary man might benefit therefrom his time would be up.)

...and Kyroot said:

A chap at a near by table, surveying the extensive smorgasbord of experiences, sweet, sour, hot, mild, complimentary, and conflicting, waved away the menu and said, "I'll just have whatever Life's having."

...and Kyroot said:

As long as you know what you're talking about it's a waste of time.