

aid:

Once, in a time not given in your history books, two worlds went to over their dispute regarding man; the first said that his uniqueness was his intellect, and the other claimed that man's singularity
was in his sense of morality;
A passing comet observing all of this on the run, mused how the second notion was simply growing pains of the first one

...and Kyroot said:

Graffiti heard near a bush in the park,

Just after dark;

"Anarchies make little progress,

But they pay no taxes."

...and Kyroot said:

When pressed, this one guy would admit it... (which didn't help much once he returned to his wrinkled state).

...and Kyroot said:

Just because things are irrelevant doesn't mean they HAVE to be irrelevant.

...and Kyroot said:

Here's the latest good one I heard over in the speaker's area of the park; this one fellow declared, "If 'having something on your mind' is proof that you've got a mind then a dirty diaper would be a voting proxy at Proctor & Gamble's stockholders' meet."

...and Kyroot said:

The speaker declaimed, "Tis hard to be old, and be an optimist.", and from the crowd came a response, "Hell, it's hard to be old.", the speaker clapped his hands together, gave a little leap, and shouted, "I rest my case."

...and Kyroot said:

That which by the tongue creates,
Can by the tongue be destroyed.

...and Kyroot said:

All things that can grow,
Will grow.

...and Kyroot said:

A guy asked me to pass this along, says he, "Anything you gotta talk about, other than this,
ain't worth the fucking
effort."

...(I've been sitting on this until a slow news
day.)

...and Kyroot said:

An ordinary city dweller once asked an Intellectual Revolutionist how long this kinda stuff had been going on, and the subversive replied, "I don't know, and if I did I' d probably lose all interest."

...and Kyroot said:

All localized descriptions,
Impose
Localized restrictions,
And are Disadvantageous,
To a Universal view.

...and Kyroot said:

Earlier times still exist.

...and Kyroot said:

The rules of the Revolution are always changing.

...and Kyroot said:

In ordinary life a man is not an operational actor in a scene until his peers and environment acknowledge and name him as such; There is no such soothing luck in the Revolution; there are no titles, no established positions, or ranks; And not only does your ordinary environment not know there is a revolution under way, they certainly do not recognize you as a participant...

...(If you wanna get downright down, dirty and gritty you could surmise that the way to tell if you're a real, real, REAL Revolutionist is that no one, (outside of camp), knows you are one, but you...and of course that no one knows you know but you.)

...and Kyroot said:

All achievements are dead.

...and Kyroot said:

Training and education are local, Secondary versions of new level, Primary intelligence.

...and Kyroot said:

The Revolution never starts.

...and Kyroot said:

In some worlds, (mostly internal), a man who can write axioms can write his own ticket.

...and Kyroot said:

Two eyes always have a paradoxical look.

*

• ...and Kyroot said:

The purpose of the Revolution is not the overthrow of power, nor a • change in direction; the true intent of this kind of revolution is simply that the Revolution always continue.