

and Ky said:

This one guy says, "The order I get the I am th ere's ANYthing impossible in the si of man.", and his partner replied, "Try this; Say wnat you just said with a silly
face."

...and Kyroot said:

Sad to note, (but a job's a job),
Simply "walking back and forth",
Won't get you to back, or forth.

...and Kyroot said:

Sensing that his youngster was getting somewhat "carried away" with his sophomoric philosophical swims, the ole man advised, "Don't get too concerned over 'holding up a mirror to Nature' - She's seen it all already."

...and Kyroot said:

The resident sore head of the corner over there compares "much of ordinary men's intellectual activities with awkward sexual moves in that "many men try for penetration before they have their arms fully around the facts!"

...and Kyroot said:

Noted one voice:

"Everyone who goes there eventually returns,

But sometimes they pick up a peculiar look...I think..."

...and Kyroot said:

Words have their own internal compass,
And speakers are not necessarily navigators.

...and Kyroot said:

(Although the following should not disturb normal night time slumber, you still might best keep it from any pre-school neurons):

The very worst monsters,
Have never been named.

...and Kyroot said:

To recycle religious rhetoric,
For satirical secular scenes,
Leave us say;
There are, thank god,
No dancing lessons in heaven.

...and Kyroot said:

Over in Spongie-land, there's an artist who says his core desire is to "draw those things the public has never hungered to see.", and, as it turns out, he can't draw flies, which cuts down sizeably on his potential frog market.

...and Kyroot said:

Questions, processes;

Answers, "things-specific".

...and Kyroot said:

One ole timer noted to a small visiting nephew, "Kid, you ever notice
how it's almost impossible to offer anyone any sort of advice without whining."

...and Kyroot said:

The following notice might prove to be either a boon, or bane, or both,
to either an optomist, or a pessimist, or both, and it is;
    Into each life,
        Some life must fall.

...and Kyroot said:

A revolutionist base that continually attempts to specifically define what it is - ain't.

...and Kyroot said:

Where you're stationed, close to one hundred per cent of non fiction is fiction.

...and Kyroot said:

They tell of a (don't you just love it - "they tell", they, like I don't know who the hell "they" are since I made up the whole wrestling card, but, as I'm sure you'd say,"be that as it may"; on with the bloody match), they tell of a Revolutionist Camp where, if you sought entry, they first would ask you one question - just one, but if you attempted to answer it in any manner whatsoever you were summarily dismissed and rejected.

...and Kyroot said:

A man with elephant feet,
Can leap as high as he wants to.

...and Kyroot said:

One fellow told his partner, "Everytime some individual does you harm you could say to yourself, by way of a count, 'Four'."; his reflective reflection pondered this then asked, "Couldn't you just as well say 'Green!'",
"Sure, that's just as good."

...and Kyroot said:

Language has its Own Genetic Code,
And human emotions are DNA laced.

...and Kyroot said:

The mighty liege proclaimed, "So we must cling close to our sacred duty to steadfastly repeat that which we have already done, and to studiously avoid any future that contains change.", so spake the horrific Anti-King.

...(For those of you with a historical hobby, you might make a note that his royal insignia is that of a duck's reflection.)

...and Kyroot said:

Remember, as the old folks used to say;
The only "good" partner,
Is a GOOD partner.

...and Kyroot said:

• Oh, all right, I'll tell you; They further tell that the Revolutionists who asked the "one question" of all applicants used this query, "Does man have free will or not?", and if the would-be volunteer showed any sign whatsoever that he or she was even considering ANY response they were immediately turned away
with no further comment.

...(As a footnote, it's also reported that the Camp's leader had the following
to say in this matter,
"Everyone's natural sight is slightly skewed
and less than perfect,
and if you haven't already discovered this on your own there's little we can help you with.")

•
...and Kyroot said:

(I close shop for tonight by leaving you with the final lines from a speech given on your planet by a certain unnamed force at a non-terrestrial time, he said):

"Is man but to eat, sleep and screw?,
Was he not given a tongue to raise more hell than that."