...and Kyroot said:

If you don't say what you are they can't say what you're not.

...and Kyroot said:

If you relieved a man's memory of debts
you would have about relieved him of memory.

... and Kyroot said:

See broke - be broke.

...and Kyroot said:

Even an atheist who believes in conspiracies
believes in god.

... and Kyroot said:

One man,
 sometimes seriously engaged in the pursuit of serious secondary fun,
  says that his clan's motto in such areas is,
   "Drop Your Drawers First,
     Ask Questions Later."

...and Kyroot said:

Revolutionist info is kinda like some type of advanced agricultural seed inthat you can both consume it, AND plant it.

... and Kyroot said:

(Another of those historic comments that no one is absolutely sure they ever heard):
"There are several ways of looking at some things,
and of course,
some ways of looking at several things,
but there is no one way of looking at EVERYthing.
.....(of course this is not true,
there IS one such way,
but you know of course,
I'm not allowed to discuss it here." .

.....[In the exact middle of one dark night
the kid suddenly sat up straight and said,
"Hey Pop, did you just hear what I heard?",
and the ole man replied,
"Gad, I hope not my boy,
or we're BOTH done for."])

...and Kyroot said:

If you're gonna think about this also think about that.

... and Kyroot said:

Pursuing his desire to be "original"
one kid joined the Unique Person's Society;
(when this was discovered
the Irony Guild cancelled his membership).

...and Kyroot said:

What you don't eat
can't bother you....

.....(Unless you think about wishin' you had et it.)

... and Kyroot said:

Some guy left a message on your answering machine,
(you weren't in so I took it),
he says that after considering some of what I have recently said around here in light of what I have said,
he concludes that it would only be a Revolutionist who wouldn't CARE whether you could ever"go back home" or not.

...and Kyroot said:

The civilized are those who pretend that the personally irrelevant is of supreme importance;
The subversively, SUPER civilized are those who fully understand the above and yet still pretend.

...and Kyroot said:

Anyone who tells someone else "what to do"
is certainly doing their job,
but they still don't know what they're doing.

...and Kyroot said:

I know of one place where two short men can see almost as far as one tall one.....

...(This is also the spot that's fogged in a lot).

...and Kyroot said:

One of those ranters that periodically
show up at the college quadrangle climbed up onto a conveniently over-turned physics instructor and made the following declaration,
"If you allow any two of your senses,
such as speaking and thinking,
to become TOO familiar with one another
you can either become a famous, well-known-person, or else live to regret it."
And someone in the assemblage shouted back,
"You silly twit - thinking is not one of our senses!"
And the crowd suddenly grew so agitated that the sharp crease in many fresh-pressed trousers disappeared.

...and Kyroot said:

One frantic little fellow's frothy by-line is,
"Long ideas are wrong ideas."

... and Kyroot said:

City Notice, Circular RC-17 Dash Four:"You must hate evil to properly hate life."

Update to this Notice: "You must hate stupidity to properly hate life."

Update to the Update: "There ain't no such thing - forget it."

...and Kyroot said:

I understand that some of Life's kin
do not find it "nice", humans laughing in the dark. .....NO!- You go figure!

... and Kyroot said:

Right in the midst of a fancy City event
 a visitor stood right up and pronounced,
  "If exceptions DO prove the rules,
    you people have some pretty shoddy rules."

...and Kyroot said:

If anyone ever thought they were in some sort of revolutionist competition with someone else - they've already lost.

... and Kyroot said:

This one guy continued to call himself Abernathy
even when he had good cause to suspect otherwise.

...and Kyroot said:

On this one northeastern galaxy (looked at from here)
they've cut right on through it and declared that the name of the game is,"The Game".

... and Kyroot said:

One City group
 waited around for a long time;
  they did not, however,
   wait long e-n-o-u-g-h.

...and Kyroot said:

Another speaker
having his turn up on the margarine carton (this particular park couldn't afford a regular soap-box)
rhetorically proclaimed,
amidst his forlorn observations regarding contemporary humanity's decline
"What, I wonder,
would our esteemed ancestors,
the holy ancient ones have to say to our ability for mass, incalculable slaughter of our fellow man...", and from the crowd a voice raised,
"They'd probably wanna know how we do it."

... and Kyroot said:

A REAL Revolutionist
doesn't believe in upkeep.

...and Kyroot said:

"Son, I wanna tell you,
if complaining did any good everybody'd do it." To which the kid responded,
"But Pa Pa - they do!"
"Ah hah! - see?"

... and Kyroot said:

Anybody who believes in any thing
believes in EVERY thing.....(you got no choice.)

...and Kyroot said:

One guy chuckled and admitted,
"When I'm out of town
I'll buy anyone's story.....course, same's true
when I'm out of my mind."

...and Kyroot said:

A certain king,
long hostile and cynical towards religion,
finally noticed that all of the beliefs he had seen and conquered had one common thread -
They one and all held the idea, expressed in their addressing their god,
"You - who are our only hope.",
and the monarch for a while,
solemnly strolled through his garden repeating these words, and thinking, "It does be true, no matter how misguided be the rest of their antics this part does be true."

... and Kyroot said:

Boy! - do YOU ever have something you want me to say!

...and Kyroot said:

A sage unmarked by sorrow
will not make the charity rolls.

... and Kyroot said:

There is a relatively un-visited playing field
in this universe wherein you CAN "tell the players without a program";.....(but once they realize you can do so they won't let you back in the stadium.)

...and Kyroot said:

If,
as they say in the City,
you'ld like to "save a little time", I'll go ahead now and tell you that the "easy way out" is to be a Revolutionist.

... and Kyroot said:

Looking up from his little book
the kid asked,
"Hey ole man,
if it IS like this writer says that,
"Opinon is knowledge in the making.",
then what does that make knowledge to be?"

.....(In deference to something-or-other the elder decided this one be one Kyroot wherein he did not necessarily
"have the last word".)

...and Kyroot said:

I relay this comment I recently heard
with no editorial inflection intended or infered,
a familiar creature simply said,
"Being around humans gives me the blues,

...and Kyroot said:

Most people have another brain
they never use
and rarely suspect.

... and Kyroot said:

Hey, dig it, the good news; If it doesn't cost any more it's not worth any more.

.....(and, oh yeah, even better news;
where this is happenin' -
they don't give credit.)