

...and Kyroot said:

When he looked in a mirror for the first time
this one guy's only comment was, "Hey, I can take a hint."

...and Kyroot said:

In his later years

one fellow told me that his own motto had become,

"Give It All You Got.", and

further noted that it had taken him this long to get a personal understanding of the process of "give", and to clearly see what constitutes "got", and to correctly measure the quantity of "all", and finally to recognize "you", and at least suspect the true location of "it", but once that's all put together, he says, the energy and information behind the motto is of the highest quality..."Give It All You Got."

... and Kyroot said:

Only those who perceive and support the future have one.

...and Kyroot said:

Although it's not seen in your visible world,
you're told you're being left at the same place where you were first told you were loved.

.....(You just watch,
someone'll write me and ask if this is the same as saying,
"You die where you were born"
you just watch.)

...and Kyroot said:

Everyone gets soft in their old age except for two types; Those born hard, and those who don't "old age-i-fy"

... and Kyroot said:

There are no vocal certainties.

...and Kyroot said:

The only legacy left to one kid
from his ole man was a Velcro backed lap warmer which when held up to the light revealed the words,
"Never Trust A Sentence That Begins With The Word 'But'."

... and Kyroot said:

Another tasty feature of being in This Kinda Stuff is that there IS no safety in numbers.

...and Kyroot said:

Even the king finally gave a direct order
to the palace cat,
and the feline thought, "Why not."

...and Kyroot said:

From the vast expanses of Spandex-ville
comes a letter from a woman who says
she enjoys thinking about some of the things I say, but she insists on adding that it "Gives her the 'willies' "
to think about
thinking about such stuff on her own.

... and Kyroot said:

If you can get three guys
to pose together for a photograph - they're dangerous.

...and Kyroot said:

On a cross town bus, while waiting at a major intersection,
a fellow about mid-way toward the front stood and delivered, (said he),

"Although it is an accepted historical and cultural fact that some composers could write difficult music even they couldn't play why should we ergo excuse a man for writing ideas that he himself cannot think?"

... and Kyroot said:

Just because something can't be seen three dimensionally doesn't mean it can't be seen.

...and Kyroot said:

After less than auspicious occasions

one chap was want to remark,

"A miss by an inch

is as good as a miss by a mile.", until his partner finally noted that his little

"truism" was in no wise serving their decorous interests;

So at such times he began to assert that,

"A miss by a mile is as good as a miss by an inch."

.....(If Kyroots had a moral it might be,

"Kyroots ain't got no morals."...oh,all right

I guess we could weaken and go far enough to note that,

"In many circumstances,

it's hard to turn around.")

... and Kyrroot said:

Having to "stand up for your rights"
is proof you have none.

...and Kyroot said:

All really good stories are apocryphal.

..(Why else you 'spose they all happened sometime else and not now.)

... and Kyrroot said:

Since it is the responsibility of prophets, scientists, critics and inventors
to "solve existing problems"
what's the Revolutionist's job? - Huh?

...and Kyroot said:

One guy's still wondering if laughter might indeed be
"The ultimate form of variety."

...and Kyroot said:

Last week in mid afternoon
there was a group of people sitting on the grassy hillock near the City Stadium
and one man suddenly stood and declared,
"I am no more than a mere lodger in my own body.", and no sooner had he sat down than another chap arose and announced,
"And I am no more than a guest within my own mind and personality", and after he returned to the ground a third figure stood and said,
"And I,
I fear,
am but another hapless participant in yet another Kyroot
that is going to leave me nonplussed,
if not perfectly confounded."

... and Kyroot said:

All real good thoughts
have a secret, built-in self protection.

...and Kyroot said:

From the local City comes another letter, this one from a chap who says he has undertaken to turn himself into a "recognizable philosopher"
solely through his own private efforts;
He goes on to note that he believes he now has all of the "questions about life" narrowed down to this query:
"Which is the silliest, the past, or the present?".

... and Kyroot said:

Final Notice: The substitute for good social position
is being able to think;

Final Notice Part II: Those OF such position paid me to say it like this rather than the other way around.

...and Kyroot said:

A few still like to hear about the guy who got so good at it that he didn't have to do it anymore.

...and Kyroot said:

This king declared,

"Those who pity me I slay.",

and an out of town visitor inquired

as to how many men had been so dispatched,

and his kingliness replied, "None.", and for a moment the transient thought he'd learned something....

...(A curious

thing -

No?)

...and Kyroot said:

At some sort of meeting
over at the University's Faculty Centre
one man took the podium and commenced his comments to witly:
"The best suggestion made thus far is the suggestion that hasn't been made thus far..."

... and Kyroot said:

Once you've figured out how things work spatially
you can go on to more complex and satisfying affairs.

.....(it can be helpful
to note the actual simplicity of spatial operations in that all possibilities are limited to three dimensions
and two magnetic directions.)

...and Kyroot said:

There was this one chap who began to seriously harbor the notion of marrying himself...until one day he suddenly noticed how ugly he was,
and DEEPLY resented having made such an unseemly observation.

... and Kyroot said:

Don't fret the possibility of additional torture - just BEING a prisoner is confession enough.

...and Kyroot said:

A Meaningless Little Askewed View Of The Talking Evolution Of Man:

"Anything I don't understand doesn't exist.": then

"Anything I don't understand is evil."; to,

"Anything I don't understand is incorrect.", and then,

"Anything I don't understand doesn't exist."

...and Kyroot said:

The bad news is that dead heros are not measured by the size of their bullet holes.

... and Kyroot said:

To back up his demands
the ruler of one City threatened his neighboring state with an "age bomb" which, when dropped would make everyone there get older;
the threatened monarch pondered this potential then declared the danger manageable
and dismissed the threat, whereupon the first ruler then claimed to have a "new and improved version" of his bomb
that would not only cause everyone hit to become older,
but would moreover make them talk about it incessantly...
...(capitulation was almost instant.)

...and Kyroot said:

Once upon a timey-time
there was a man in the City who would make a mess
just so's he wouldn't have to clean it up.

...and Kyroot said:

If a plot's not subversive
it's not much of a fuckin' plot.

... and Kyroot said:

One contemporary commando says that the best thing about having problems is not having any help.