

...and Kyroot said:

Over in the City park
a guy tapped me with his cane and remarked,
"Say Bub, ever notice that all the world's favorite proverbs either have to do with god, or drinkin'?"

...and Kyroot said:

On another world there was once a group who seemed so silly that they were taken as a joke;
they persisted in this for such a time that they became frightening; they then continued on this course to such a point that their neighbors again began to take them as a joke.

...and Kyroot said:

One guy was so determined not to soil his new carpet that he didn't have any.

...and Kyroot said:

In a kingdom far enough removed so as not to be much discussed any more,
the people once took all their problems, rolled them up in a real tight ball,
and made the king swallow it.

...and Kyroot said:

As the off-spring set to depart to that great college in the City his ole man bespokely spoke,
"Even where you're going, my boy, remember; All food is warmed-overs."

...and Kyroot said:

In a different dimensioned universe they once called revolutionist activity such as this,
"The Wondrous Fib."

...and Kyroot said:

Have no fear, ole dear; All wars are won by SOME one.

...and Kyroot said:

City Conversation Fragment In E-Sharp, Measures 114-117:

"In some places just 'being right' isn't enough."

"Like what kinda places?"

"Name some."

...and Kyroot said:

One guy was so rich,
(and so something else)
that he would tip strangers - other human beings just for being alive and available.

...and Kyroot said:

There is a certain place
here in your universe whereat is produced all of the things you don't like;
it won't do you any good looking for it;
you can't stop them at any place you can find.

...and Kyroot said:

Why say that many dreams are not realized once you understand that many dreams are not intended to be realized.

...and Kyroot said:

This here one ole man said to the kid,

"Look, I guess that some of what I tell you can seem a bit abstruse...", and the lad thunk,

"Some seem a bit abstruse?! - Say, am I in the right Kyroot?", but he let his elder continue,

"But do try to look beyond such temporary distractions, and for instance, let me today point out for you the metaphoric, the symbolic - yeah, and even the literal, every day truth that; The cheaper you are the harder it is to find a bargain.

...(Later on his own time
the kid further thought,
" 'A bit', can you believe it?
'A bit abstruse' - Wow!, what are ole men comin' to.)

...and Kyroot said:

Note reminder: History is facts;
any recollection of the acts are kept some where else.

...and Kyroot said:

A man who makes two Seem like three,
Might take your mind out
On a spree.

But he who makes two Seem like less than it is,
Shouldn't be trusted with nuclear devices.

...and Kyroot said:

How can the aims of a secondary life be other than secondary themselves?

...and Kyroot said:

A fellow in some profession or the other writes to say that if I have no proprietary objection he is going to start advising all his patients and clients to "think in Kyroots."

...and Kyroot said:

Revised toast

for those frequenters of

Neural Hall banquets: Drink to me only with thine familiarity.

...and Kyroot said:

A bunch of guys were hanging out around the Department Of Motor Vehicles and I heard one of them say, "Boy am I tired of being stared at.", and one of his buddies said, "But you're never stared at.",
"Yeah", he replied, "And I'm tired of that too."

...and Kyroot said:

(Quote): "A mind that keeps banker's hours will soon be rolling in dough.";
This is not actually a Kyroot, but a suggestion for one that I received in the mail;
I offer it up here just as an example so's to help you always recognize the "real thing" from the fraudulent.

.....(The only problem with this effort is in the fact that I make up most of my mail also.)

...and Kyroot said:

Only that with no ordinarily apparent purpose might have any purpose worthy of a Revolutionist's attention.

...and Kyroot said:

One guy's shared observation for the day; "Peel away the mist from fog and what'da got?"

...and Kyroot said:

From the viewing audience comes another note from a man who says that although he knows his opinion doesn't count for much.

...and Kyroot said:

Hey, forget worrying about the score - they ain't even got the rules settled yet.

...and Kyroot said:

From the illusionary pocket of one non-extant revolutionist came a specious dictionary which after all of this,
had the temerity to define ordinary thinking as,
"The inability to think of more than one thing at a time."

...(good thing no one was there to call an imaginary halt to this fallaciousness.)

...and Kyroot said:

One rough ole sore head cautioned his brood,

"No matter what an exemplary, law-abiding life you lead remember, we're all goin' up the river and do hard time."

...and Kyroot said:

One fellow's standards were so high that even HE was damn near impressed.

...and Kyroot said:

One up-and-coming politico said,
regarding his neural neighborhood,
"The best thing about one's constituents is in not having to see about their needs."

...and Kyroot said:

After detailing the day's latest wars, crimes and set-backs,
the City commentator concluded with this note,

"These are NOT exemplary times.", and one excited viewer thought, "WOW!, I can't WAIT to see where he'll point to as comparison."

...and Kyroot said:

At a recent literary reception at the electrician's union hall a fellow told me that he had named his "memory facilities";
He calls it,
"The Grandeur Of Doom and The Reckoning Of The Mighty Deceased."

...and Kyroot said:

Shortly after sundown

one ole man told the kid,

"Say,

being able to 'remember' stuff's only the half of it."

...and Kyroot said:

On the second day of the kingdom's first annual "Cultural & Intellectual Festival" one man stood and commenced his part of the program with these words,
"If I may now speak to you metaphorically about sex...", and the king whispered to an aid, "Have that man shot."

...and Kyroot said:

First, Law-Of-The-Day: There is a guy who waits

until nine o'clock to do nine o'clock business.

Second Law: Everyone has a future.....of some kind.....some where.

...and Kyroot said:

One guy's most promising cry was,
"Ahhh, here we are, sinking to new heights."

...and Kyroot said:

People with funny ideas shouldn't point fingers... ..(unless they have equally humorous digits.)

...and Kyroot said:

The weaker the idea
the more people you need;
The stronger the idea
the less people you attract.

...and Kyroot said:

A chap I passed over by the Poetry Department's running track said with no due modesty,
"I - and I mean "I" in its most singular sense - I demand as much of my cells as I do myself."

...and Kyroot said:

The speaker concluded his lengthy, provocative and forceful remarks with the comment, "Anyone still trying to live by words spoken four thousand years ago squanders their life.", an interested listener pondered this and asked, "What about four days ago?", the speaker replied, "Same thing."