

...and Kyroot said:

...
This one god looked out on his creation and mused that it would be nice to sometime, somehow lower himself to the level of his equals.

...and Kyroot said:

"Kid", he said, "If you're gonna be famous you gotta get the right name."

...and Kyroot said:

One City had a guy who billed himself as,
"The Man With Two Brains", and everybody in the world came to see him.....I'm not using a figure of speech,

I mean literally -- everybody in the world came.

...and Kyroot said:

(Intelligence strictly for seditious ears): Once you know what it means you can quit using a word.

...and Kyroot said:

I once noted to a chap over in the City that "Everyone looks serious when they're horny," information that proved to be his undoing.....(don't ask).

...and Kyroot said:

As a year-end gift to all his clients and friends one of those park philosophers offered this annual wrap-up (says he):
"The first bite is always the best;
the first bite is always the bitterest;
the first bite is always the easiest;
the first bite is always the most difficult,
and the first bite is always what it seems to be,
and nothing at all like one expected."

.....(based on the visible response of his audience he later told me confidentially that he hopes next year comes a little later next year.)

...and Kyroot said:

Never underestimate
the power of a paradox.

...and Kyroot said:

Over in another reality

its god referred to everything other than himself as, Miss Jones,

and first thing every universal morning

he'd light a dark panatela,

prop his feet up on his desk and say,

"Miss Jones - take a letter...."

...and Kyroot said:

One guy's explanation is that he's saving his best thoughts for later.

、 10/31/90-(9.5)

...and Kyroot said:

Most gods have little pet names for their creations - and they sure as hell
don't want you to know about 'em.

...and Kyroot said:

If you don't know who your audience is it's hard to HAVE an audience;
if you don't know who your audience should be,
it could be even harder.

...and Kyroot said:

And this one guy said, "But it's not my fault," and darn if he wasn't right.....(Can you believe it!)

...and Kyroot said:

Striving to expand their personal explorations

the pirates determined not to dilute their efforts with sailing concerns

...and Kyroot said:

Luck is primarily a youthful event.

...and Kyroot said:

Pressed a bit further he admitted that at times he stretched things he spoke about, but firmly added that he ONLY stretched the truth - nothing else.

.....(Believe it or not,
but the interrogators were satisfied with this,
and believe it or not,
the interrogators were history after this.)

...and Kyroot said:

In the "Semi-Conscious" - I mean, "Semi-Annual Serious Poetry Contest"
over in the City,
one of the submissions that didn't make it to the final round opened with this line,
"Love, Oh Love,
My heart is like my bladder..."

...and Kyroot said:

A viewer writes to say that he hasn't written in since last time.

...and Kyroot said:

Then there was this other guy
who HAD no explanation.

...and Kyroot said:

If you need to seek verification for what you know,
save some effort, you don't need verification;
whatever it is - you've got it.

.....(my secretary asks
if it's possible to UNDER cook the subtlc?)

...and Kyroot said:

Over on a certain rather angular planet

"RSVP" at the bottom of the card means you were invited by accident.

...and Kyroot said:

"Testing, one, two, three, testing: Players, may I have your attention:
Anyone who's not playing with a full deck is in the game whether they wanna be or not.

.....testing, testing -
can you hear me
out there?..."

...and Kyroot said:

One chap valued his brain so much he refered to it as his "Ten Dollar Pancake"...(no one seemed to understand what this meant,

least of all - his brain)

...and Kyroot said:

Several people called about the ad, but none knew why.

...and Kyroot said:

Every time it'd rain

this one revolutionist would get wet.....if he was outside...

...without an umbrella...

...and Kyroot said:

The king of one territory
decreed that all books published,
no matter the nature of their subject,
must have, "harsh titles."

...and Kyroot said:

On each occasion when this one reality
would begin to bring its creation into the home stretch
some of the horses would begin to yawn
some would put on weight, and others would start staring even more intently
at the world beneath their feet.

...and Kyroot said:

What men call "conscience"
is the instinctive drive for a certain chemical balance.

...and Kyroot said:

For reasons yet unclear,
this one reality has announced its "business hours".

...and Kyroot said:

One absolute monarch,
just to go ahead and get it over with,
had his Offical Describer describe him as,
"Strong, though unfair;
regal, yet quite vain;
sophisticated while still a Philistine, and judicious with no mercy at all."

....(It was good to get
THAT little business
outa da way.)

...and Kyroot said:

Offering up his own helpful hint another viewer writes to suggest we might keep the audience from "Too intently focusing on one figure
if we called the show, 'Kyroot And Kyroot'."

...and Kyroot said:

If you're planning on a reasonably long run for the show
let me give you some good old fashioned, "leg breaking" advice:
Don't let the author also direct.

...and Kyroot said:

One guy's unyielding motto was, "Always stick with your FIRST thought - until you have another one."

...and Kyroot said:

During the recent literary festival at the Dry-Waller's Hall a youngish chap revealed to me that he'd brought one of his favorite axioms "up to contemporary daylight";
the reference in point is that he now says,
"A rolling stone gathers no habits.", and he further states
he intends to put this revised version into practical use just as soon as he figures out how to do so,
and STILL get a car loan.

...and Kyroot said:

Here's another "Time Saver" for you temporally tight:
Anything "almost not worth mentioning"
is likely to be TOTALLY not worth mentioning.

...and Kyroot said:

Any time he wanted a really good laugh
this one incendiary sort would go home,
lock the doors,
close the shades,
and pull out his atlas.

...and Kyroot said:

Say look,

just between us:

If you just gotta tell where you are at least don't tell how you got there.

...and Kyroot said:

Being a neural radical means being able to think in real time.

...and Kyroot said:

There's a man who says he knows for a sweet-certainty that things are not nearly as far away as people say they are;
(he says he doesn't know how to prove it, but says he doesn't HAVE to prove it.)

...and Kyroot said:

There is a reality wherein things known do not have to be proved.

...(not long ago, and certainly not far away)