

...and Kyroot said:

When no one bothers to point it out -- it's gone FAR beyond the realm of "obviousness".

...and Kyroot said:

In a spoken world there are two versions to everything.....which is What makes them appear to be different, but which is actually no proof.

...and Kyroot said:

To be uncertain is to be civilized;

To be uncertain is to be of sound, stable and admirably ordinary mind.

..."and also", said Kyroot,

"Continuity is the imaginary benchmark of collective intelligence."

...and Kyroot said:

A sizable chunk of an ordinary man's ability to think is in him thinking that
He's probably already doing it all wrong.

...and Kyroot noted:

The more a problem seems to lie towards the secondary end of the spectrum, and
Away from the necessary,

The more difficult it seems to get it to leave once it comes for a visit.

...and Kyroot said:

'Tis only a revolutionist who can be civilized and not feel he suffers from it.

...(And a viewer asks:

"Could there be more than one or two levels of being 'civilized'?" --

-- Did he say "one or two MILLION" - or what?...)

To encourage physical exercise

One man put the toilet paper holder on the bathroom ceiling.

...and Kyroot said:

For the first day of spring one ole man told the kid,
"The music you hear was written before you got up this morning."

...then Kyroot offered this additional Mental Health Assurance:

Trying to "pin down" what sanity IS will help the ordinary stay so.

...and Kyroot said:

From any and all sane, reasonable collective views,
To build a bus capable of space travel you must first have a broken bus.

...(Golden Galactic Theorem One: "You May Not Be Able To Get There From Here";
G.G. Theorem Two: "You May Not Be Able To Get There.")

...[All of which should segue into the second verse which leads one
From the idea that, "If you're going to make an omelette you've Got to break some eggs." onto the wider expanse of,
"If you're going to have some eggs they'll be broken."
...(And, Yes, that's right boys and girls,
You don't HAVE to "get it" for this to BE operational.)]

And a chap near the north side of town recently thought,
"In the by-play between acts and facts if acts could talk -- what a noisy place this would be."

...and Kyroot said:

The bridge between the necessary and the secondary is always talk.

...and Kyroot said:

In the city they say that , "He who smiles in the face of adversity is a fool.",
But the revolutionist would add, "...or else a rebel looking in a mirror."

...a chap over in that direction last September reflected,
"The worst thing about human troubles is how they seem to 'trouble' you."

...and Kyroot-The-Consumers-Advocate commented:

In finite marketplaces man's desires and his indifference are sorely similar -- but one of them usually costs more than the other.

Just past two this afternoon a new speaker took over in city park and had this to say, "Experience without thought is like eating without tasting the food.", And a guy in the crowd yelled, "Yeah, I've eaten THERE before."

...and Kyroot said:

Mans' invention of gods and demons makes it possible for him
To anthropomorphize his own missteps.

...and over-near, but just-outside-of, a local closet Kyroot noted:

An interest that is not a "vested interest" MIGHT turn out to actually be interesting.

And a viewer writes:

"After personally reflecting on some of what you've said

It would now appear to me that all of man's so-called 'social problems'

Are due to his mistaking heredity for environment."

(Sir: If that were true it would be correct.)

∴...and Kyroot said:

The reason time, space and general intelligence are all measurable
Is due to their relative unimportance.

...and Kyroot remarked:

The more civilized tell the less so that they too much let their "Basic instincts drive them" -- as though they had a choice.

After a period in which the local reality had subjected
The creatures to some particularly trying times,
From amidst the huddled masses arose a small voice that said,
"Not to worry -- some of us are more huddled than others."

...and Kyroot said:

One guy noted that revolutionist thinking is kind of like making the matches you found
Match UP WITH the flame you already had going.

...and Kyroot said:

Since man's factual world is not absolute,
Problems therein receive AB-solution rather than "A" solution.

...then, acting as YOUR "ole man" Kyroot said to you-de-kid:

If life WAS in any danger it would let the masses be LED by the masses.

...(Now YOU be your own ole man and tell your own kid brain cells about this.)

...and Kyroot observed:

Parades are for those who don't want to walk alone;

...(And everyone cried out - "We don't want to walk alone!")

...and Kyroot said:

Where time is allowed to run freely — birds CAUSE bird seed.

...and Kyroot said:

Failing to look around will certainly keep you from ever getting lost.

...(And a chap driving a 1957 Herringbone, [with patches on the elbows], declared,
"Being DIS-oriented is NOT better than not being oriented at all." - [and he DID say this with a good deal of authority].)

...and up on "A" Deck, Kyroot the Entertainment Director noted:

Enthusiasm is to man's secondary world as hunger is to his necessary one.

Before all important speeches the mayor's mind would remind him,
"The less certain you are of what you're going to say, the better you should dress."

...(How true, how true! --

And how much MORE could we not learn from our proud public officials!)

...and Kyroot said:

As some of the after-work crowd began to gather
In the speaker's area of city park,
A chap mounted the soapbox and addressed them just so:
"Sex is a metaphor for life;
Sex is a symbol for life;
Sex is a simile for life....",
And a voice from the assembled shouted out,
"Hey, enough foolin' around -- get down TO IT!"

...and Kyroot's Criminal Tip For The Day:

If you kill a man with an adjective the police'll NEVER figure out what happened.

...and Kyroot said:

When anything,
Be it man, enzymes, or a star,
Can develop no further — it begins to talk.

...and Kyroot noted several unrelated news items:

"A cheap watch tells cheap time.";

"Unfashionable dimensions are no friend to the hip.";

And,

"Most brains were built by non-union labor."

...and Kyroot said:

One city,

Surveying its grand ballroom and its citizens actively therein, mused,

"We dance to shadows and ghosts, which IS of course,

What makes life worthwhile."

And a gentleman writes to us:

"I have seen your show on numerous occasions,

And for a while I was intrigued by your calling what you talk about, 'the revolution',

But if you could make heating-&-air-conditioning into such a pertinent metaphor

I'd be even MORE interested.

Yours Sincerely", etc.

The primary world CAN'T sing, but it's all the secondary can sing ABOUT.

...("Query," injects a viewer, "Does this infer that man's intellect can never Have a true 'life-of-its-own'?" -- Hey, what da'ya think, guys?!)

The words of a certain rebel sergeant to some troops,

"It could be said that a neural revolutionist is 'frivolous with a purpose' --

It could be so said, but I'M not going to say it."

This station is now proud to bring to you the feature,

"You & Your Money, Honey": Ordinary thought is intelligence on a fixed income.

...and Kyroot said:

In some races the crippled run faster.

...(And a listener thought, "You better NOT be talking about the human race!")

...clear thinking and a two dollar bet will get you a place to stand trackside.

...and Kyroot said:

Facts, (over in the secondary),

See acts, (back in the necessary),

As being generally "out-dated", and far behind the times.

92040-43

Snakes were originally allowed to RIDE buses.

...and Kyroot said:

According to the laws of the city there are two kinds of evil;
Thing which are "evil in themselves",
And things which are "evil because they're prohibited.",
But the wider revolutionist view would note that the "evil" man continues to speak of Arises from things being named;
That is: Things become evil simply and only by being called evil.

...(Whales always eat sharks -- which is why no one can see whales.)

...and Kyroot said:

Another interesting aspect of man's brain, (as regards exercise),
Is that it believes it can only learn how to run through instructions.

...and Kyroot said:

Once the kid realizes he is in the ole man he can then realize the opposite as well.

...and Kyroot noted:

The generational expansion of man is orderly -- it's only the revolutionists who bump into one another.

...and Kyroot said:

Once it finally got to BE Friday in his world,
One man burned all his notes.

...then Kyroot gave this -

Proverb Update: Tall fences make good neighbors -- except as between thoughts.

...and Kyroot said:

After spending thirty years on the matter,
One guy went ahead and concluded,
"Just BEING ordinary will provide you with ALL the grief you'll EVER need."

...and Kyroot said:

One of the speakers in city park yesterday declared,
"HAVING doubts is a sure sign OF superior intelligence.";
...(He later admitted in private that the city made him say that.)

...and Kyroot said:

During a free-lance Think-A-Thon one guy thinned:

"If a poet is one who can say the most in the least amount of words
Then a revolutionist poet should be one who can say the most with OUT
Actually saying much of ANY thing."

...and Kyroot said:

The difference between man's singular secondary problems and the generalized necessary ones
Is that one group is fact-based, the other, act-based.

In his preparations for daily life this one fellow would periodically remind himself that
It is easier to be aggressive when you're either hungry or over-fed.

...(As they marched, this one band sang: *"Stuffed or starved,
Stuffed or starved;
From our flanks our Steaks are carved."*

.....[A system that cannot fuel itself
Is hardly worthy of being CALLED a system --
-- Much LESS an intelligent one.]

...and Kyroot said:

In politics the question is always "the past"
While with religion that IS the answer.

...and Kyroot said:

In a neural closet the value of any idea is whatever the next mugger BELIEVES it to be.

...and Kyroot noted:

Men who feel superior to animals are well within their rights.

...and Kyroot said:

House-guests in your head shouldn't overstay their welcome.

...("Okay you guys, that's long enough, you're outta here!")

...and Kyroot said:

Local reality finally admitted to the creatures,
"Whatever is most important to you IS the most important thing in the world,
And I'M not going to interfere in it."

One mama brain told a youngster, "Don't point with your mouth full."

One being struck with a dash of stardust thought,
"Revolutionist thinking is like the unraveling of a labyrinth
That ordinary thought doesn't even want to admit exists."

...(Then gazing pensively into the deep, night sky he mused,
"No wonder it's so fuckin' popular.")

...then Kyroot added:

Of course in one way,
The intellectual revolution IS every person's most favored
And passionate pastime,
It's just that it goes under so many different names that
It is rarely identified as such.

...(Or, as that famous folk song over in Galaxy NT-74 goes:
"We're all gonna ride this train." -- "But I don't WANT to ride this train." --
"That's okay, we're STILL all gonna ride this train." -- "But I STILL don't want to." --
"All that's still ALL RIGHT.")

...and Kyroot said:

Even the fearful, once they caress bullets,
Become enamored of gunfire.

...(Once you think, there's no turning back -- even if you GO no where.)

...and Kyroot noted:

The reason men can't find the original Garden Of Eden is that
It was torn down to make way for a talking high-rise.

And the guy down in the alleyway shouted out,

"Watch it! - A guy without GOOD ideas may have YOUR ideas! - Watch it!"

...and Kyroot's City Update For This Date:

It is only creatures deprived of the facts who find it disturbing — and thus satisfying.

One city thinker said that he looked on his own intellectual process and history as
A large ball of string he had rolled up, and then traded for a tinfoil collection.

One guy referred to his own thinking processes as, "soup dancing."

...and Kyroot said:

If you try and look at your hobby as an investment you end up feeling cheated.
(And a man asks, "Is that what's wrong with my approach to the revolution?")

Thought one rebel to himself,

"A question with no answer is almost as good as no question at all."

A young rebelliously inclined suburb mentioned to its older city-part,
"The easiest way to think of life is in terms of 'profit-&-loss';
The easiest way to get deluded about life is to think of it in terms of profit-&-loss."

According to one foreign myth,
A certain "Synaptic Prophet" left this message near the base of the Cranium base camp: "A small one shall become a billion,
Then the billion, a small infection."

And from our audience comes this letter:

"Is it possible that I take what you say mistakenly as being applicable
To life on this planet?"

...(What if man's intellectual dread of death is actually a fear of being left behind, and stranded here.)

Conversational Fragment overheard near the city strip mines:

"Facts can kill you!"

"Yeah! - IF they can FIND me!"

...and Kyroot said:

Eagles can never impress worms --- and if they try, they don't deserve to be eagles.

...and an observant star mused:

"Revolutionist logic doesn't go in a straight line.....or in a crooked one.....or
In a continuous one.....or in a disjointed one...."

A chap sitting on a garbage can in the city thought to himself,

"Looking back on it now it's easy to say that religion SHOULD have been the ultimate hobby...

...(Two weeks later he thought the same thing about science....then the month after that, about art.)

...and Kyroot said:

In a finite setting, prudence and moderation only exist as local concepts.

...(Addendum: In a closet NO one "holds back" -- except those who THINK they do --
[And of course they don't either.])

...and Kyroot said:

In one galaxy they had a saying,
"Only the cute survive -- and only the REAL cute live."

...(Do you suppose they have somehow equated thinking with cuteness?)

...and Kyroot took more note of, "Fun In The City":

Those who ANNOUNCE when the trains will be leaving
Can never get on board.

...(And a handsome traveler thought,

"If there is ANY justice greater than ordinary justice

Then I don't want to even be in the same UNIVERSE when it comes around!")

A certain man who had tried to pursue the revolutionist course began to wonder, "Will knowing a little, or even some, actually ever do me any good?..."

...(As the exercise of his "final request" the condemned man asked that the firing squad be enlarged to include every person on the planet.)

...and Kyroot said:

Stability, Repetition, and Sanity were Adam's first sons.

Attempting to help the kid pursue his rebelluous adventure, the ole man told him,
"Only your hormones'll know when you get there -- Ignore whatever your mind tells you."

...and Kyroot said:

Those still blind to the controlling hand of genes

Support the idea of retribution and the notion of a psychological environment.

...(As long as a caged animal believes the bars are of his own making, Escape seems possible.)

...and Kyroot said:

Men, (even the least religious), love to dream of "ultimate mysteries"
Inasmuch as they secretly know that the final answers and frivolities
Will be unable to speak.

...(What else could REMAIN an "unknown"
To a thinking, talking being?!)

...and Kyroot said:

One form of mortal, neural progress is to have no thoughts regarding it.

...and Kyroot said:

Between the necessary and the secondary, ordinary men seek a pleasant balance;
A revolutionist, a new one.